Brae Burn, Mass., June 10.—When the first pair teed off today on the second 18 holes of the 72-hole medal play for the national open championship, the weather conditions were ideal for low scores.

Following the thunder storm of last night, the gentle breezes dried the green and today's warm sun made the greens fast and tricky.

Jim Barnes and Walter Hagen continue to be the pick of the professional contingent, with Charles Hoffner of Philadelphia, who led the opening round yesterday, and Mike Brady a close second.

The amateurs, Chick Evans, defending champion, and Francis Ouimet, had many supporters, and many wagers were laid as to the low score between these two sterling players.

A big crowd was on hand today

CONTEMPT OF COURT CHARGES UPHELD

Clifford P. Smith Fined $100 and Four Christian Science Church Directors $50 Each

Four directors of the Christian Science Church were today found guilty of contempt of court in disregarding an injunction restraining them from interfering with the Christian Science Publishing Company, publishing the Christian Science Monitor. They were fined $50 each.

Clifford P. Smith, counsel for the directors, who was found guilty of sending letters to two Boston newspapers in contempt of court, was fined $100. The decision was handed down by Judge Braley in the Supreme Court. The directors were Adam H. Dickey, James A. Neal, William R. Rathbun and Mrs. Annie M. Knott.

Arguments were begun before Judge Braley today, Sherman L. Whipple representing the trustees of the publishing company, and John L. Bates the directors. The courtroom was crowded, women being in the majority.

Governor Bates pleaded that the directors had not intentionally violated the injunction restraining them from interfering with the Christian Science Publishing Company. The election of Mrs. Hoag to an associate editorship in the publishing company was regarded as within their rights by the directors, he continued, and quoted from the evidence to show that an agreement existed between counsel on both sides granting this right.

Counsel for the directors further maintained that the troubles between the directors and the trustees of the publishing company arose when the latter "sent broadcast" various notices tending to stir up strife. In concluding he asserted that no malice was shown by the directors, and they never had intentionally violated the injunction.

Mr. Whipple for the publishing company declared that the publishers considered their policy bound by Mrs. Eddy's expressed intention before her death, rather than by the church directors, and that the publishers contended that the election of Mrs. Hoag was distinctly interference, and to that extent a contempt of court.

Counsel for the trustees said that since the obtaining of the injunction restraining the directors they had more than once expressed their defiance of the court. Mr. Whipple concluded by denying that a single objectionable statement had been issued for publication by the publishing company since the obtaining of the injunction.

U. S. ENVOY OFF TO GET FACTS IN SIBERIA

Tokio, June 10.—Roland S. Morris, United States ambassador to Japan, has departed for Omsk, Siberia.

His trip thither is taken in well informed quarters here to constitute a prelude to American recognition of the Kolchak government synchronizing with identical action by the allied powers.

It was announced in recent Paris dispatches that Mr. Morris would investigate the stability and representative character of the Kolchak government as President Wilson's personal envoy and that Mr. Wilson would delay action of accepting that government until he had received the Morris report.

Wilson Reported to Be Aging Rapidly Under Strain

By International News Service.

Paris, June 10.—The peace delegates appear to be aging rapidly under the tremendous strain, with the exception of Premier Lloyd George of England, who is unchanged. President Wilson is showing the effects of his vast responsibility in an unmistakable way.

KNOX MOVES TO KEEP U. S. OUT OF LEAGUE

Resolution in Senate Provides for Separation of Covenant and Peace Treaty

By International News Service.

Washington, June 10.—A resolution which would in effect keep the United States out of the League of Nations, except by diplomatic negotiations, was presented in the Senate today by Senator Knox of Pennsylvania. The resolution would notify the Peace Conference that the United States reserves the right to take action on the League of Nations, and would effectually separate the league from the peace treaty.

The resolution describes the Peace Conference as drawing "undesirable and far-reaching covenants," and notifies the world that the Peace Conference cannot amend the Constitution of the United States. Under the terms of the present treaty, the resolution declares, "we shall continue in a state of war while our cobelligerents enjoy peace."

The resolution further warns that future warfare in Europe will be considered as "a menace to the United States."

House Passes Pay Grab Over Veto

ITALY 'PAT' ON LONDON PACT

Orlando Insists on Standing by Secret Treaty That Wilson Has Termed "Infamous"

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
Correspondent of the International News Service.

Paris, June 10.—Premier Orlando of Italy caused another hitch in the peace negotiations today when he again informed the Big Four that Italy would refuse any suggestions for a compromise on the counter territorial claims affecting the Adriatic littoral.

He declared that Italy would "stand pat" on the pact of London (the agreement entered into by England, France and Italy promising territorial concessions which induced Italy to enter the war).

President Wilson has washed his hands of the whole affair, leaving the problem up to Premier Lloyd George and Premier Clemenceau. The President's attitude is that the United

Illinois the First State to Ratify Suffrage Amendment

By International News Service.

Springfield, Ill., June 10.—Illinois went on record today as favoring woman suffrage. She set the pace for all the other States in the Union when the General Assembly voted for adoption of Senator Cornwall's joint resolution ratifying the suffrage amendment as passed by Congress a few days ago.

Pandemonium broke out in the galleries when the vote was announced. Suffrage leaders from all parts of the country were present. They cheered lustily as the clerk read the ballot. This gives Illinois the prestige of being the first State to ratify the amendment.

The House adopted the amendment by unanimous viva voce vote immediately after convening. The Senate shortly afterward unanimously adopted the amendment by roll call.

Gov. Bartlett Ready to Call Extra Session in New Hampshire

Concord, N. H., June 10.—Governor Bartlett of New Hampshire, in a telegram to Governor Burnquist of Minnesota, today promised to call an extra session of the New Hampshire Legislature in the Fall for ratification of the suffrage amendment to the Constitution, "provided thirty-five other States seem reasonably sure to ratify."

Governor Bartlett's telegram was in reply to one from Governor Burnquist, in which the latter asked that extra legislative sessions be called universally to ensure ratification of the Anthony amendment by the necessary thirty-six States in time to allow women to vote in the next presidential election.

"If thirty-five other States seem reasonably sure to ratify the suffrage amendment in season to enable women to vote at the next presidential election, I shall call an extra session of the Legislature in the Fall, unless it develops that there is no hope of favorable action here, which I do not anticipate," Governor Bartlett wired.

LANSDOWNE, U. S. N., TO SAIL ON BIG DIRIGIBLE

London, June 10.—Lieutenant-Commander Lansdowne, U. S. N., will accompany the British dirigible on its trans-Atlantic flight to Atlantic City, it was announced today. The dirigible is expected to start within a few days.

Lansdowne is a graduate of Annapolis of the class of 1909. He is a pioneer in balloon work and after America's entrance into the war was attached to the channel squadron of dirigible submarine hunters. The air ministry granted him permission to make the flight and record his observations for the benefit of the United States navy.

MEMBERS INSIST ON MORE PAY

House Overrides Governor Coolidge on Salaries by Vote of 158 to 71

The House today, by a vote of 158 to 71, passed over the Governor's veto the bill increasing the salaries of legislators from $1,000 to $1,500, to take effect this session.

The bill was passed despite determined opposition, the consensus of opinion seeming to be that it was necessary in order to prevent the Legislature from becoming "a rich man's club."

Representative Kneeland of Winchester, Republican whip; Representative Abbott of Haverhill, Republican floor leader, and Representative Young of Weston, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, defended the Governor in his stand and fought earnestly to prevent passage of the bill.

Representative Hinckley of Barnstable said that he was told by a rich man that if the bill did not go through it would make the Legislature a body of rich men. He criticized an editorial in a Boston paper which stated that the legislature would rally to the Governor's support.

"This is not a salary grab," said Mr. Hinckley, "but it is only partial restitution of money paid for hotel bills during the session."

RECALLS GOVERNOR'S VOTE.

"The Governor voted in 1903 to increase the salary of legislators from $750 to $1,000, and I am just right in line with him."

Representative Newhall of Stoneham said:

"The subsidized press is responsible for the editorials attacking this bill."

Hammerstein Weds "Tumble In" Girl, His Third Wife

New York, June 10.—Arthur Hammerstein, theatrical manager, was married yesterday to Miss Claire Nagle, one of the prettiest actresses in his recent production, "Tumble In."

The marriage took place in the City Hall of Jersey City, Mayor Frank Hague performing the ceremony. Thomas Gillen, New York real estate dealer, an old friend of Mr. Hammerstein's, was the witness.

Miss Nagle is the theatrical man's third wife. The first two wives of the manager were Miss Jean Allison and Mrs. Grace Haugland. Both matrimonial arrangements ended in the divorce courts.

In "Tumble In" Miss Nagle will be recognized first as the Cornet Girl and also for a song entitled "Won't You Help Me Out?"

BARNEY LAWYER DENIED ACCESS TO REPORT

Judge Callahan in the Superior Criminal Court today denied a petition of Thomas F. Murphy, counsel for Herman L. Barney, to inspect the report of the medical examiner in connection with the death of Patrolman Charles E. [illegible] of the Hanover street station, whom Barney is charged with slaying.

Judge Callahan allowed a petition which asked for the payment of expenses in investigating the case for Barney by counsel.

Before Judge Thomas H. Connelly in the Brighton court tomorrow, trial of the cases of Mrs. Lillian M. [illegible], Mrs. Mary E. Collins and Attorney Murphy, charged with aiding the escape of Barney from the Charles street jail, will be resumed.

"The defense promises many surprises."

JURORS AT DEATH HOUSE

Mrs. Lundgren, Propped in Chair, Hears Prosecutor's Accusations

Lawrence, June 10.—Mrs. Bessie May Skeels Lundgren, the "Sunshine nurse," sat in her pillowed chair in court today, and heard District Attorney Henry G. Wells of Essex County tell the jury that the State would show that she and she only had opportunity to poison Miss Florence W. Gay, for whose death the nurse is now on trial for her life.

He said that Miss Gay's death was not caused by cerebral hemorrhage, as the death return had stated, but that the presence of arsenical poison had been found.

He asserted that the defendant, who had attended Miss Gay, had admitted having an arsenical solution in her possession for her own use for skin disease.

Mr. Wells said the State would bring forward a druggist to testify that Mrs. Lundgren bought this arsenical solution of him.

TO SHOW OPPORTUNITY.

Then Mr. Wells declared:

"We will show that this defendant was the only one who had the opportunity to administer the poison to Miss Gay. She had the knowledge and the peculiar skill and ability necessary to do the deed."

70,000 TELEGRAPH OPERATORS ARE READY FOR STRIKE TOMORROW

CLASH WITH ARMY KEY MEN MAY DEVELOP

With 70,000 commercial telegraphers and affiliated workers ready for the initiation of a nation-wide strike at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning, big business concerns in Boston and elsewhere were today preparing for a tie-up which it was admitted nothing can avert but action by Washington.

Receipt of the strike order in Boston was marked with much apparent enthusiasm on the part of the operators, some twenty-five of whom tried to anticipate the order and begin the strike today. Neither the operators nor the telegraph companies show the slightest inclination toward compromise.

SITUATION UP TO DATE.

The status of the strike situation at present may be summed up as follows:

1—Operators everywhere are reported as eager for the beginning of the fray.

2—Company officials predict that the strike will be a farce, owing to the alleged lack of organization.

3—Telephone operators in New England will not be called out in a sympathy strike, according to union officials.

4—Twenty-five Boston operators restrained by union officials from beginning strike today.

5—Possibilities of trouble seen when American soldiers seek to operate government "leased lines" through offices of affected companies.

APPEALS TO MACKAY.

S. J. Konenkamp, president of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, made another appeal today to Clarence Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph Company, and was hopeful that the appeal would be heeded.

"First blood" for the union was claimed when it was learned that the Federal Telegraph Company, a Pacific Coast concern, had surrendered to the demands of the employes on the eve of strike.

One possibility not being overlooked by both sides is that American military forces may be called on to operate government leased wires through the offices of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, and that the strikers may try to prevent it and bring on trouble.

COMPLETE TIE-UP.

The strike, according to high union officials in Boston, will constitute a complete tieup of commercial wires, and contrary to some predictions it will be as effective in the South, where it began, as in the East and West.

The telegraphers and affiliated workers, according to I. Bramberg, president of Boston Local District Union No. 4, C. T. U. of A., are fighting for the right to organize, bargain collectively and have the wage matter "rectified."

Those affected will be commercial telegraphers only. Press telegraphers, operators of 'brokers'" divisions and railroad telegraphers handling strictly railroad traffic are not to leave their keys.

NO "SYMPATHY" STRIKE.

It was stated today by President Bramberg that while the telephone operators were technically under the jurisdiction of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, there was no idea of calling them out in sympathy.

Twenty-five operators at the Boston Postal Telegraph offices asked their union officials whether they could not "beat the national headquarters to it" by inaugurating their strike today. They were discouraged from this course.

There are 300 union telegraphers in Local Union 4, but President Bramberg says that most of those now unorganized want to come in, and the walkout tomorrow will cripple the companies at least 75 per cent. This the officials of the telegraph companies deny.

9,350 JEWS KILLED IN RUSSIAN POGROMS

London, June 10.—Nine thousand three hundred and fifty Jews have been slaughtered in pogroms in fifty different places in Russia, according to a Russian wireless message received here. The newspaper Izvestia is given as authority for the message, which indicates that most of the pogroms were in the neighborhood of Proskurov.

President Names Air Commission to Visit England

By International News Service.

London, June 10.—As a result of the NC-4's successful trans-Atlantic flight, President Wilson has appointed a commission to visit England and make an investigation with a view to establishing an American air force, separate from the army or navy, it was learned here today.

Commander John H. Towers, who had charge of the navy's trans-Atlantic flight, left for Paris last night after the ceremony at the air ministry when he and the officers of the NC-4 were decorated with the officers' royal air force cross. Upon his return to Paris he will meet aircraft manufacturers and members of the commission coming from America to make a survey of the advisability of establishing a separate air branch of the United States forces.

SIR EDWARD CARSON LOSES IN EAST ANTRIM

Belfast, Ire., June 10.—Sir Edward Carson suffered a repudiation in the eastern division of Antrim by the victory of the independent Unionist candidate, Hanna, over his candidate Moore, by a vote of 8,734 to 7,549. Legg, the Liberal, polled 1,775 votes. Labor votes elected the anti-Carsonite. Prior to the elections, friends of the Unionist leader stated that he would resign unless Moore were elected. In the last Parliamentary elections only the Sinn Feiner, Dunnigan, opposed the regular Unionist candidate, polling 881 votes to the 15,206 given Brigadier-General McCalmont.

WILSON URGES EARLY REPLY TO GERMANS

American Envoys Confident Teutons Will Sign Treaty When "Bluff" Is Called

GERMAN INFLUENCE SEEN.

There are strong intimations in conference circles that pro-German influences are at work in Italy to create discord and that they are seeking the retirement of Premier Orlando and his associates in favor of a ministry headed by former Premier Giolotti.

As a result of the Italian attitude the President is demanding that every effort be made to hurry up the German reply. He insisted that all the commissions which have not yet reported should turn in their recommendations not later than this afternoon.

Premier Clemenceau is very firm in his opposition to the acceptance of any report by the League of Nations Commission recommending the early entrance of Germany into the League of Nations. However, it is expected that a satisfactory compromise will be reached on this point.

French objections to modifications along economic lines have been overcome to a great extent and the Big Four are confident that the reply and the ultimatum will be in the Germans hands not later than Thursday.

GERMANS "BLUFFING."

Advices from Scandinavian sources report Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau as insisting that he will not sign the treaty unless more radical modifications are made. Whether he is bluffing or not is not known. Secret advices from Germany to the French and American delegations indicate that should the Germans' "bluff" be called the government is ready to resign immediately in favor of an Independent Socialist ministry. In any event the American delegation sums the situation up this way:

"Plans for a blockade and military action are perfected to such an extent that no government which could be devised in Germany could possibly resist the pressure for more than a week. That the Germans will eventually sign up regardless of the position of Brockdorff-Rantzau is regarded as certain."

Morgan and Vanderlip Say They Know Nothing About the So-called Treaty "Leak"

By International News Service.

New York, June 10.—J. P. Morgan and Frank A. Vanderlip, two of the six New York bankers subpoenaed to appear before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared today they knew nothing of the treaty "leak."

Jacob H. Schiff refused to make any statement until he knows what the investigation "is all about."

Both Paul Warburg and Thomas W. Lamont are out of town.

H. P. Davison recently declared he had no copy of the treaty and had seen none.

TAKEN FROM RICHES BACK TO CITY HOME

New York, June 10.—Fate and the law have combined to make more trouble for little James Robbie Ashe.

Supreme Court Justice Tierney decided the five months' old foundling must leave his luxurious home with the family of Mr. and Mrs. John Feinbloom and be returned to the New York Nursery, in accordance with the agreement signed by the Feinblooms when they took him. They planned to adopt him. The question of religion had been raised in the case, but Justice Tierney said it made no difference whether the parents of this child were Jews, Christians or Mohammedans.

NEW BILL CUTS U. S. ROAD OPERATION COST

Washington, June 10.—The estimate of $1,200,000,000 submitted by the railroad administration was cut down to $750,000,000 in a bill reported out by the House appropriations committee. This was the sum carried in the bill which passed the House at the last session and failed in the Senate.

HOUSE PASSES SALARY BILL OVER VETO

Governor Overridden After Lively Debate on Legislators' Compensation

Representative Odlin of Lynn said:

"It is not of importance at this time what the Governor did in 1908. He has been in public life a great deal more since then and undoubtedly has learned something."

Representative Webster of Boxford said:

"The Legislature is doing more work this year than previous Legislatures, and the compensation should be increased accordingly. If the Legislature is not to be a rich man's club this bill must pass. One member has already resigned because he could not afford to stay for the present salary. There is a definite purpose to keep down salaries just as there was a definite purpose to starve out the poor members of the Constitutional Convention."

"A MATTER OF CONSCIENCE."

Representative McDonnell of Boston said:

"The Governor must have been in doubt of what attitude to take, for he had to seek outside advice."

Mr. Abbott of Haverhill said:

"It is entirely a matter of conscience with me. When I was elected I knew what the salary was and could see no reason why I couldn't serve for it."

Mr. Young of Weston said:

"There is one thing in the bill that damned it from start to finish. That is the repudiation of the obligations of every member to serve for $1,000, and that is contrary to the rule which forbids a member to vote upon any measure in which he has a personal interest."

Mr. Kneeland of Winchester said:

"My constituents felt that the bill ought not to pass. Those who voted for the bill will hear from it next Fall."

LENINE URGES HUNGARIANS TO RESIST ALLIES

Sends Message to Bela Kun, "Red" Leader; Mackensen Reported Fighting Czechs

Exclusive Cable to the International News Service From the London Daily Express.

Vienna, June 9, via London, June 10.—Nicolai Lenine, the Bolshevik premier of Russia, has sent a message to Bela Kun, the Red dictator of Hungary, urging him to hold out against the allied ultimatum, said a dispatch from Budapest today.

Field Marshal von Mackensen, formerly one of the chief commanders of the German armies on the eastern front, who was last heard of under allied guard, is reported to be directing the campaign of the Hungarian Reds against the Czechs, according to information from diplomatic sources.

The belief is expressed that Bela Kun, the Hungarian dictator, will not give direct answer to the allied ultimatum demanding cessation of hostilities against the Czechs, but will counter with a demand that his government be recognized and be given the right of representation at Paris.

The Hungarian Socialists are urging that terms be formulated immediately, but War Minister Boehm and Chief of Staff Stromfeld are dominating the situation, contending that the entente's power would be lessened if immediate action were taken. The Socialists are threatening to join the bourgeoisie to turn the Bolsheviks out of power.

The ultimatum which was sent to the Hungarian Bolshevik regime by Premier Clemenceau demanded a cessation of hostilities against Czecho-Slovakia. "Extreme measures" were threatened if the ultimatum was rejected.

Any man who served in the famous Yankee Division and who knows the address of Robert Patton, who served with that outfit, is asked to communicate with Mrs. Carrie Patton of Baltimore and thereby make a mother's heart glad. Robert is her son and she has not seen him for 25 years. When adversity visited Mrs. Patton's little home 25 years ago she was compelled to place her four children in a home. Robert was then eight years of age. She has appealed to Mayor Peters to locate him. Some time ago the boy wrote to Mayor Peters asking him to help find the mother.

Proprietary Stamps Must Be Cancelled, Says Malley

Internal Revenue Collector John F. Malley announced today that proprietary stamps, by which the government collects the tax on toilet and medicinal articles, must be cancelled when the article is sold. A number of these uncancelled stamps, which were taken from articles purchased in drug stores, were recently received at the internal revenue office. Proprietary stamps on taxable toilet and medicinal articles must be so cancelled to prevent further use of them.

Collector Malley stated that the regulations in regard to these stamps state that "the stamp should be affixed to the outside of the package or container of the taxed commodity so that upon opening the same the stamp will be destroyed. The initial or name of the vender written in ink or stamped with rubber stamp, together with the date when the stamp was affixed or cancelled, must appear on the canceled stamp."

The penalty for making use of one of these stamps to denote the tax imposed without cancelling the stamp is a fine of not more than $100.

NEW CLEWS PROMISE EARLY SOLUTION OF BOMB PLOT, SAYS FLYNN

RADICALS CLOSELY WATCHED

May Day Conspiracy Like That of Last Week Hatched in New York, Detectives Believe

New York, June 10.—"Highly important discoveries have been made in the bomb plot in the last few days. One or two more details added to the structure of evidence we have built up and the plot will be pretty nearly cleared up."

This statement, made today by William J. Flynn, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, is the first indication that any real progress had been made in the efforts, participated in by the thousands of police and secret service agents in all parts of the country, to round up the gang of extremists responsible for the two bomb plots.

SEVERAL CLEWS AT HAND.

The Secret Service has been concentrating its attention on an identification of the anarchist who was blown to bits in the bombing of the home of Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer. Several days ago samples of the wearing apparel of the anarchist were received by Superintendent William M. Offley of the local Department of Justice. They consisted of small pieces of the clothing, hat and shoe worn by the plotter and photographs of the laundry marks found on his collar.

Chief Offley said today:

"If we can identify the Washington anarchist, it should be a simple matter to locate the group with which he was associated. We need to know only one man of the group and the rest should be easy. Having a number of clews to the Washington bomber, we are naturally trying to fix his identity. There has been no other clew half so promising."

BESSEMER STORY ABANDONED.

Both Chief Flynn and Superintendent Offley treated lightly the report from Bessemer, Pa., that the bombs had been manufactured there and distributed in suit cases to the cities in which they were exploded. The plot was said to have been exposed in the confession of a sixty-year-old woman, made to Chief of Police James Finerty of Bessemer.

"I am not ignoring any clew," said Chief Flynn, "be it ever so trivial, but if I were you I would not attach too much importance to the Bessemer story."

The Secret Service, it was learned yesterday, heard of the Bessemer woman's story some time ago and subjected it to thorough inquiry. The story did not sound coherent, and investigation established glaring flaws that caused the Department of Justice to abandon it.

EXTREMISTS WATCHED CLOSELY.

Chief Flynn's continued presence in New York has confirmed the early impressions of the police that both the May Day conspiracy, conducted through the postoffice, and last Monday's country-wide plot, were hatched here. Every headquarters of extremists has been under strict surveillance, and the movement of every extremist has been watched with the closest scrutiny.

A list of anarchists who have not been in evidence since last Monday has been compiled, and names have been checked off as the men appeared. The list is diminishing. The investigators hope by this method to reduce the suspects until the man blown up in Washington alone remains.

In the meanwhile every manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer of clothing, shoes and hats, and every laundry has been canvassed. It is this line of investigation, it is said, which produced the discoveries Chief Flynn spoke of last night.

Acting on the suggestion of Superintendent Offley, Police Commissioner Enright assigned 300 patrolmen in civilian clothes to guard the homes of prominent men in this city, who might have, by public utterance or act, invited the enmity of extremists. Public buildings, clubs and churches also will be guarded.

CLINTON FAIR AGAIN CANCELLED BY THAYER

Clinton, June 10.—Colonel John E. Thayer of Boston and Lancaster, president and financial angel for thirty years of the Worcester East Agricultural Society, has decided that the Clinton fair shall not be held this year as planned. Three years ago war conditions causes suspension of the fair, the understanding being that after the war it would be revived on a broader scale. County Commissioner Warren Goodale of this town, after a conference with Colonel Thayer, announced that conditions do not appear favorable this year.

MRS. LUNDGREN RESTS IN PILLOWED CHAIR, WEAK BUT CONFIDENT

Mrs. Lundgren is brought into court in a chair with her husband, Alfred J. Lundgren, in close attendance. The State charges that she administered poison which caused the death of Florence Gay, an Andover school teacher.

"While it is not necessary to prove a motive, yet we will present what might be considered a motive. After the death of Miss Gay a quantity of household goods was found to be missing."

Mrs. Lundgren sat with tightly clasped hands and sunken eyes fixed lined the points of law to be considered. intently upon the district attorney as he outlined the points of law to be considered.

"This indictment is one of the most serious," he said, "murder in the first degree. There are three degrees of so-called homicide—first degree, deliberately, premeditated, malice aforethought; second, that a person has killed another with malice aforethought, and, third, manslaughter."

CARED FOR INVALID MOTHER.

"In 1917 there was living in the house at Andover Mrs. Gay, an invalid; Miss Gay, the daughter and housekeeper, and a number of roomers who were Abbott Academy pupils. In November Miss Gay became very much run down and her doctor prescribed that she take a rest.

"During the first two weeks, a Mrs. Morse was called in as night nurse to relieve your defendant, who was day nurse. Mrs. Morse is now dead. After she left, the defendant said she would assume those duties for additional compensation. Later, however, another nurse assumed those duties, remaining until a week before Miss Gay died in December 13, 1917."

The district attorney referred to other employes of the house, one a woman who cared for the rooms, a houseman [illegible] Winslow, who came to care for Miss Gay the day before she died and remaining until her death. The prosecuting attorney reviewed the progress of Miss Gay's illness and spoke of Mrs. Luce, a relative, who was much in the Gay home.

"Miss Gay," he said, "had a certain form of nausea and later developed a very marked type of nausea. Four or five days before her death she developed a most acute diarrhoea. The doctor will tell you of this as well as of the marked thirst that accompanied these symptoms."

The district attorney referred to a conversation relative to the transfer of Miss Gay to a sanatorium, in which it was said that Miss Gay would not care to go.

MISSING ARTICLES FOUND.

"While it is not necessary to prove a motive," continued the prosecutor, "yet we will present what might be considered a motive. After the death of Miss Gay a quantity of household goods was found to be missing. The defendant herself had complained that men were constantly trying to get into the house. She reported that at least three burglaries had taken place.

"A warrant was secured and the defendant's room searched. Many articles were found that were identified by a relative of Miss Gay as belonging to the Gay family. Old heirlooms, such as a pair of gloves worn by a cavalry officer in the Civil War, silver, linen bearing the laundry mark of "100," the property of the Gay family, were included in the list.

Jury in Trial of Accused Nurse in Poison Case

Foreman, Terry A. Newhall, coal dealer, of Lynn, 46 and single.
Charles E. Bryant, shoemaker, Haverhill, 64, married.
Charles L. Keeney, janitor, Lynn, 57, married.
Fred F. Parsons, carpenter, Rockport, 53, married.
Thomas S. Webb, clerk, Lawrence, 64, married.
Charles H. Hoyt, boat builder, Amesbury, 30, single.
Ralph F. Shaw, shoemaker, Newburyport, 44, married.

Arthur C. Currier, carpenter, Newburyport, 61, married.
William Wiener, manager, Lawrence, 57, married.
Thomas J. Kelly, clerk, Beverly, 38, married.

"While the defendant was in the police station, a telegram came summoning the defendant to New Jersey because of the illness of a member of her family. While she was in New Jersey, as she was allowed to go by the police, it was decided to take up the body of Miss Gay. Then it was found that death was not caused by cerebral hemorrhage or tuberculosis as the death return stated, but Professor Whitney of Harvard and Dr. George Burgess Magrath of Boston found the presence of an arsenical poison instead.

"Evidence will be introduced to show that the embalming fluid contained no arsenic and that, according to Massachusetts law, embalming fluid can contain no arsenic.

"To State officials in New Jersey the defendant said she had no arsenic in her possession, but later admitted that she had Fowler's solution, an arsenic solution, in her possession. The defendant said she had bought it in Andover and New Jersey and that she used it for a skin disease that she had contracted from a coat worn by Miss Gay who also had it.

DRUGGIST TO TELL OF SALE.

"We will introduce a druggist who will tell you that Mrs. Lundgren bought the solution of him, and that when he asked her how she used it said she used it internally and externally for a skin disease caused by the bite of a peculiar form of mosquito in Massachusetts."

The arrest of Mrs. Lundgren in Andover, and the finding of the nurse on the flor of the bathroom, with her mouth over the open cock of the gas fixture, was also gone into fully by the prosecuting attorney.

FAITHFUL HUSBAND ON HAND.

The jury filed into the court room ten minutes before the defendant was carried into the room, in a chair bolstered up with pillows. The taxi driver and a court officer carried the chair and deposited it carefully outside the bar enclosure. The devoted husband, Alfred J. Lundgren, followed close behind, removing the hat and veil, arranging pillows and placing the swollen, cushion-like feet, clad moccasins, on the footstool.

Mrs. Margaret Hooper, the nurse who has withdrawn from the side of Mrs. Lundgren, but who was in the courtroom, came forward and assisted in arranging for the comfort of the defendant.

On motion of Attorney J. Daley, it was decided to take the jury on a view of the premises in Andover, where Mrs. Gay and her daughter, Miss Gay, lived and where, it is alleged, the crime was committed.

Mrs. Lundgren waived her right as the defendant to accompany the jury, and Attorney Daley addressed the twelve men briefly, asking them to pay especial attention to the room occupied by Mrs. Rosamund A. Gay, mother of Florence W. Gay, when she was sick, and where Miss Gay was nursed by Bessie May Sheels until she died.

The deputies in charge of the jurors were then sworn in and were instructed by the court in their duties.

The motor bus used to transfer the jurors from the Red Tavern at Methuen to the courthouse was used for the trip to the Gay homestead at No. 35 School street, Andover.

With the attorneys for the defense and the prosecution in one limousine and the newspaper men in another the trip was made over the smooth sunny roads to Andover. As the cars passed through School street a white-gowned procession of young girls wound in and out of the sun-dappled street.

COMMENCEMENT AT ACADEMY.

It was commencement at Abbott Academy and the pupils were marching to the chapel for the baccalaureate sermon, that same chapel where Florence W. Gay, as a teacher, had sat so many years. The procession passed the Gay homestead just as the jurymen left the bus to enter the house. Only the jurors, with the court officers and attorneys, entered. On their return they met a circus parade in Essex street.

As the officers brought the frail defendant once more into the room, on her pillows, the parade, with calliope screaming, passed under the window.

BRITAIN EYEING PROHIBITION IN THE U. S.

Lord D'Abernon, Liquor Traffic Chairman, Says England Will Learn from America

By International News Service.

London, June 10.—"In my judgment no action in the direction of total prohibition in Great Britain is likely to be attempted with any measure of success until we have complete knowledge of the success or failure of the experiment in the United States."

This statement was made today by Lord D'Abernon, chairman of the Liquor Traffic Control Board, when questioned regarding the possibility of Great Britain's following the example of the United States in declaring for a "dry" country. Continuing, Lord D'Abernon said:

"The action now being undertaken in America, Canada and elsewhere where almost complete prohibition has been adopted is being watched here with intense interest. A better and broader view of the subject can be obtained if we regard the different countries, England, the United States and the others, as each endeavoring to determine the old and difficult drink problem on its own lines.

"We regard the United States in this matter as in the friendliest rivalry with ourselves. At present we consider that in the last five years we have made greater progress towards a satisfactory solution than has been obtained in any other part of the world. Perhaps the United States will go us one better and achieve more towards a stable solution than we have succeeded in doing.

"If so, we shall be glad to learn from her experience and take from her whatever measures may be most efficacious and more suitable for this country."

NEEDHAM YOUTH DIES TRYING TO SAVE ANOTHER

J. J. Booth, a Marine, Drowns With Seaman in New Jersey

By International News Service.

New Brunswick, N. J., June 10.—Private John J. Booth of Needham Heights, Mass., a member of the Marine Corps, and Seaman E. Powers of Hartford, Ct., a navy man, were drowned yesterday in the Delaware and Raritan Canal 100 yards from the naval radio station, which is one mile north of here. Private Edward McLaughlin of the Marine Corps barely escaped death.

McLaughlin was found in a semi-conscious condition on the bank of the canal. He said Powers, who was unable to swim, was thrown into the water when his canoe overturned. McLaughlin and Booth plunged into the water to rescue him. Powers caught both of them by the neck and the three went down struggling. Booth tore himself loose and McLaughlin had to strike Powers in the face to get free. He was exhausted by his efforts.

Powers seized Booth again and they went down. McLaughlin said he reached shore and became unconscious. Both bodies were recovered by marines from the radio station. The three men belonged to the guard of the radio station.

Booth received a telegram yesterday that his father was seriously ill and close to death. He obtained a furlough and notified his family he would be home today.

IRELAND ON THE BRINK OF REVOLUTION.

It appears that a general revolt may be expected in Ireland at any time. England has a heavy armed force in the island at present, but there is a question of the willingness of the imperial forces to fire on the people should they rise in force under competent leaders. The articles on the "Irish Question" by George Creel now running in the Boston Daily American and Sunday Advertiser will be found extremely interesting and timely.

WILKINS CALM AS 6 JURORS ARE CHOSEN

"I Have Clear Conscience," Says Doctor Charged With Slaying Wife

Mineola, L. I., June 10.—"I have gained weight due to my enforced confinement. I have a clear conscience and faith in God, and am in excellent health."

Dr. Walter Keene Wilkins handed copies of this brief statement to newspaper men as he entered the Supreme Court here at the opening of his trial for the alleged murder of his wife last February 27.

The sixty-seven-year-old physician appeared perfectly calm as he surveyed the crowd of spectators and the forty-eight talesmen. The court is the same in which Mrs. Florence Carman and Mrs. "Jack" DeSaulles were tried for their lives and won.

Dr. Wilkins was clad in a frock coat and striped trousers. He also wore a flourishing white beard, grown since his stay in jail.

The State charges Dr. Wilkins with the murder of his wife, Julia N. Wilkins, in the yard of their Long Beach, L. I., home. Dr. Wilkins sticks to his original story that he and his wife surprised three burglars in their home and that the thieves beat Mrs. Wilkins to death.

SIX JURORS CHOSEN.

Six jurors have thus far been chosen, at the trial at yesterday's session, but the care with which they were selected exhausted the panel of forty-eight talesmen on hand. Another panel of thirty-five talesmen was in court today when the trial was resumed. Justice David F. Manning was selected by the Appellate Division to preside.

The thirteenth talesman examined was the first accepted as a juror. He is Edward Parish, a retired farmer of Central Park, L. I. He is sixty years old, married and will act as foreman of the jury.

A second juror was chosen with the examination of the twenty-second talesman. He is Richard H. Superfity, married, also a farmer. The third selected was Daniel H. Smith, sixty, formerly an electrical engineer and now presiding at Oyster Bay.

The fourth and youngest juror chosen was Edward A. Deubert, forty, of Bellmore, L. I. He is married, and is a wire examiner for the Curtiss Airplane Company at Garden City.

Juror No. 5 is William J. Barlow, sixty-two, married, of Freeport, L. I., also employed by the Curtiss Company. William von Velsen, fifty-three, was the sixth juror.

ONLY 3 WOMEN IN COURT.

Examination of the talesmen revealed many of them opposed to capital punishment. District Attorney Charles R. Weeks of Nassau County asked them how they regarded circumstantial evidence and whether they were opposed to capital punishment.

Charles N. Wysong, counsel for Dr. Wilkins, asked each man if he had seen the exhibit at the Eden Musee, Coney Island, called "The Wilkins Tragedy." None had seen it.

Only three women were among the spectators when the trial began. The court room was fairly filled by men. Dr. Wilkins appeared interested in the selection of the jurors and frequently conferred with his counsel.

COUNCIL VOTES PENSION TO DEININGER WIDOW

A pension of $75 per month for the widow of Patrolman Charles E. Deininger, whose killing resulted in a murder charge against Herman Barney, the alleged auto bandit, was voted by the City Council. There is considerable speculation as to whether Mayor Peters will veto the order, for the Mayor recently declared himself opposed to the granting of special pensions.

LABOR DEBATES DAYLIGHT LAW IN CONVENTION

Warm Controversy Develops, Middle West Delegates Favoring Repeal of Measure

By International News Service.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 10.—A warm debate over the daylight saving law was precipitated in the convention of the American Federation of Labor today.

The Middle Western delegates, led by E. W. McCullough of Omaha, proposed that the convention go on record in favor of repeal of the law. Timothy Healy, international president of the firemen's association, offered a counter resolution urging Congress to continue the law.

The convention faced a crisis today when a large number of delegates from the Pacific coast threatened to bolt, unless the convention heeded their demands for the amalgamation of all national and international unions with the elimination of trade departments. Organization heads were at work among the coast delegates in an effort to convince them of the rashness of their threats.

The suggestion that a nation-wide strike be called on July 4th to show the power of organized labor probably will be shelved. The California delegates favor such a course, but the majority of the convention is clearly against it. Final decision will be made when the Chicago delegation arrives late this afternoon.

Efforts to prevent the re-election of Samuel Gompers as president of the federation may also be abandoned. The Gompers opposition thus far has developed no great strength. Gompers presided at today's session and, despite his recent injury in an automobile accident in New York, hopes to be able to hold the chair at every session.

This was the last day on which resolutions could be introduced, though none of the resolutions will be acted upon until tomorrow. Secretary Morrison said no resolutions of a radical type have been offered and he knows of none in contemplation.

He Quit Tobacco

This veteran, S. B. Lamphere, was addicted to the excessive use of tobacco many years. He wanted to quit but needed something to help.

He learned of a free book that tells about tobacco habit and how to conquer it quickly, easily and safely. In a letter he writes: "I have no desire for tobacco any more. I feel like a new man." Others report similarly. Wonderful for easily overcoming cigarette and pipe habit, and chewing.

Anyone desiring a copy of this book can get it free, postpaid, by writing to Edward J. Woods, TD-21, Station F, New York City. You will be surprised and pleased. FIVE YEARS FOR NOTE FORGER AT PORTLAND

Portland, June 10—Admitting forgery, Ludwell L. Howison, executor of the estate of the late Fred E. Richards, head of an insurance company, was sentenced here to five years in State's prison.

Howison was charged with forging Richards' name to notes aggregating more than $132,000.

Mr. Howison claimed that unwise investments and decreased valuations of securities due to the war were responsible for the forgeries.

The minimum sentence was fixed at six years by Judge Lauren M. Sanborn, but later he called Howison into court and changed it to five years.

SOLD SHOES AND BOUGHT GUN TO TAKE LIFE

Disappointed when his revolver failed to fire, John Joseph McKenna, twenty-two, of No. 117 Cabot street, Roxbury, placed the muzzle to the side of his head again and fired in full view of his mother while she was preparing supper, dying instantly. The revolver was purchased with money secured by pawning a pair of shoes.

No reason could be assigned by the parents of the boy, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McKenna, for his action. According to them he had been in the best of health and had always enjoyed considerable popularity among his friends.

During a talk with members of the family, the young man drew the gun from his pocket, pointed it at his head and pulled the trigger. When it failed to go off he calmly remarked: "That dealer stuck me," and tried a second time.

Jerry Watson Has His Troubles Presiding at Meeting

Prolonged laughter, caustic remarks, appeals for fair play in the distribution of the city's Fourth of July appropriation in the district, resignations of two leading citizens from the committee, cries of "sit down" and "throw him out" featured an exciting meeting in the Roxbury Courthouse, called to arrange plans for a big celebration in that district on the Fourth of July.

A public meeting in Roxbury is not a public meeting unless there is something to excite interest. To excite even a slight wave of passing interest you must produce some disturbing factor.

If there is one dish which the opponents of Councillor James A. Watson like to see it is that delicious scramble, that selfsame trouble. And that dish was served to Watson at the meeting, for he was the presiding officer.

In opening Chairman Watson declared that he took it upon himself to secure the quarters for the meeting; that he told the employes of the place they were entitled to overtime; that he proposed to take up a collection later to pay each man who served in keeping the hall open $2 apiece. He promised to start the subscription with a dollar out of his own pocket.

OTHERS HAD QUIT.

He explained that he and the others, Sherwin L. Cook and Charles T. Cockrell, started the celebration idea, but was sorry to state that "two gentlemen had resigned." He read their resignations. They were accepted "with regrets" by the big crowd present, representing delegations from Wards 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18.

Two stalwart guardians of the peace held the crowd in check in the hallway. At one time during the meeting it was necessary for one of them to pacify a citizen from Ward 13, who experienced a rise in temperature when he heard Patrick A. Kearns of Ward 17 refer to the ice cream the children got when he was chairman of the Roxbury Fourth of July committee.

Chairman Watson forgot his gavel and had to use his hand to rap for order, much to the delight of the crowd.

William H. Keough of No. 55 Delle avenue, Roxbury, secretary of the committee appointed at a previous meeting, rose in his place to make a report after he was recognized above the hubbub by Chairman Watson.

MONEY FOR CHILDREN.

"I rise at this time to offer a report," said Keough in opening. "The advisory committee, Roxbury Day celebration committee, met. On that committee are ten members, Mrs. Elizabeth Stearns and Raymond L. Connolly, Ward 12; Mary Magee and Frank J. Good, Ward 13; Mrs. Daniel Thompson and William H. Keough, Ward 14; Mrs. Daniel V. Cleary, William A. Motley, Jr., and John J. Madden, Ward 15; John J. Capelli, Ward 16. Mr. Connolly was elected chairman. Mr. Keough was elected secretary.

"The committee voted to recommend that the money ($2,000) appropriated by His Honor the Mayor be spent in entertaining the children and divided equally in the various wards of Roxbury for games, refreshments and general amusements for the children.

"We recommend that a committee of five from each ward, two of which shall be women, be appointed to act as an executive committee to oversee and have charge of the spending of the money in conjunction with the chairman appointed by His Honor the Mayor, Andrew J. Peters.

"For the entertainment of the returned service men, we recommend no parade. Instead we suggest memorial services to be held on the evening of July 3.

WATSON TRIES TO QUIT.

"We recommend that from the moneys collected by subscription and donations there be held band concerts, bonfires, fireworks, athletic games, finishing with dancing in the evening in the several sections of the district.

"We recommend that refreshments be served at the dance; that service men be admitted free to all exercises, each to be supplied with ice cream and refreshments free at all times."

The reading of this report was listened to with close attention. Chairman Watson left the chair, appointed John J. Capelli acting chairman, made a speech and wound up by tendering his resignation.

"I've lost the stone out of my ring, and I'm glad I haven't lost something else," said Watson. "I'm talking rationally and coolly. I have no feeling against any man here. I started into this affair without any idea of injecting politics. Two members of the committee resigned. I'm the third member. I'm going to resign. Before doing so, however, I want to say that you can't collect money in Roxbury. You can't expect the average man in Roxbury to give up. We've got to depend on the wealthy men, the man with the roll, to stand the burden. They will not come across for politicians. I'm not going to ask a man for a cent if it's going to be spent along political lines."

"He's told you why he intends to resign," said Acting Chairman Capelli. "What action——

OPPOSED TO POLITICS.

"I don't see why Jerry should resign," said Secretary Keough of the advisory committee. "This is the first time I heard of Jerry trying to get from under. I hope he'll stick. I personally am opposed to having politics enter into the celebration."

Patrick A. Kearns moved that Watson's resignation "be not accepted," and it was accepted unanimously with a loud "No!" followed by great applause after Watson had stated he was neglecting his work and didn't think he could make the affair a "proper success."

Despite the vote the acting chairman allowed several to lavish praise on Councillor Watson.

"Jerry is a worker," said Mr. Madden of Ward 15. "He is our only Councillor from Roxbury. He can go to the front for us."

"Mr. Watson, they refuse to accept your resignation and I turn the chair over to you," said the acting chairman.

Here Mr. Kearns of Ward 15 asked Mr. Watson if it was his purpose to do something for the soldiers and sailors.

"We omitted a lot we ought not and invited a lot here we shouldn't," said Watson, resuming the chair. "This committee will have about as much to do with the Fourth of July appropriation of $2,000 as that clock on the wall."

Roger Scannell called attention to the report of the advisory committee and said it was not being acted on. He asked that the report be adopted.

"The report concerning the money we haven't got?" asked Watson.

Mr. Good of Ward 14 argued that the money should be spent on the women and children.

"The $2,000 appropriated by the city of Boston is for women and children," he said. "Let that fact be thoroughly understood before the report is accepted.

Representative Beardsley of Ward 18 thought that the committee ought to have a parade.

Chairman Watson injected a few remarks to say that "we're going to have a nice, harmonious meeting," causing much laughter.

Representative Murphy threw a monkey wrench into the machinery of the meeting by declaring that Representative Beardsley did not know what he was taking about.

KEARNS OVERRULED.

"I thought I was the only one who would say anything funny," said Chairman Watson, as he called Murphy to order.

Mr. Kearns of Ward 15 rose to a point of order. He was overruled. Representative Murphy said no man had a right to object to what he said. Ambrose Woods of Ward 14 couldn't see for the life of him "where Mr. Murphy's motion was in order."

There were so many men trying for the floor at this point that Chairman Watson became confused. A man at the door with all stops out was giving a full organ recital about some fancied wrong. Watson eyed him furiously, and came back at Ambrose Woods with the statement that he (Woods) was out of order.

Everybody at this point was trying to get a motion before the meeting. One man wanted to cut the $2,000 appropriation into two sections.

A man at the door remarked how General So and So would act.

"Yes, just like General Nuisance" said Chairman Watson amid great laughter.

It was at this point that an officer removed a man who persisted in heckling the chairman.

VETERANS AGAINST PARADE.

John Drew of Ward 12 declared that a recently formed Legion of World War Veterans in his district had voted against the parade, 240 to 10.

"But there are 7,000 service men in Roxbury," said Watson.

At this juncture Harry Dooley of Ward 14 got the floor and read a petition containing 200 names.

"We stand emphatically against any parade or other demonstration that we might be asked to participate in," said Dooley.

"That sounds good," said Chairman Watson. "You want to rush the petition into the Mayor before they can collect."

A motion was made to have a parade and it was carried unanimously, causing Chairman Watson to remark to Mr. Dooley of Ward 14, "Where's your 200 men?"

More motions were propounded. They came so fast that Chairman Watson said:

"I'm getting dizzy."

An argument then started as to where Ward 18 fitted in Roxbury

ABOUT WARD 18.

Patrick Kearns said part of it was in Roxbury.

"And what part is that?" asked Watson.

"The Roxbury part," said Kearns.

"Where is the ward line?" asked Watson.

"The main trunk sewer divides Roxbury and Dorchester," said Kearns, heatedly.

"God help us," said Watson.

"I deliver hay out there," said a meek-voiced man in the rear.

"Where, in the sewer?" asked Watson.

"No, in the cemetery," said the man.

Representative Murphy came to the rescue by asking that Wards 17 and 18 be combined.

"For what?" asked Watson.

"For the dough," said a voice on the side.

"A little order, we're not making any progress," said Watson.

A loud report was heard outside.

"Is that thunder?" asked Watson, as he ran for his coat.

The rain came down in torrents outside and Watson announced that the [illegible] stood adjourned to meet ne[illegible] night.

BOSTON IN NEW PACKING HOUSE MERGER

Bachelder and Snyder Are Allied With $25,000,000 Organization

New York, June 10—Bachelder & Snyder of Boston are in the new independent packing house merger, according to John A. Hawkinson, president of the new organization.

Mr. Hawkinson said that the new merger would be able to compete with any packing organization in the country. The other concerns are the C. Clinck Packing Company, Buffalo; Parker, Webb & Co., Detroit; F. Schenk Sons & Co., Wheeling, and the Macon Packing Company, Macon, Georgia.

"The union of the organizations," said Mr. Hawkinson, "is to be known as Allied Packers, Inc. The company probably will have an authorized capitalization of $25,000,000 in 7 per cent. preferred stock, 250,000 shares of par value common stock and $25,000,000 6 per cent. debentures.

"In connection with the financing arrangements at this time there will probably be issued $16,000,000 preferred, 200,000 shares of common stock, and $16,000,000 in debentures."

"Plans are already under way for extensions and additions in packing plants taken over. We will have distributing agencies throughout England and Europe generally and will make a special feature of the export business, as well as catering to the domestic trade. It is a noteworthy fact that all the companies taken over by Allied Packers, Inc., are among the most successful of the so-called independent packers."

Mr. Hawkinson has established offices with Imbrie & Co. of No. 61 Broadway, bankers for the consolidation.

IRISH FREEDOM MASS MEETING TONIGHT

Cardinal O'Connell, Michael J. Ryan and Judge Cohalan to Speak

Cardinal O'Connell, Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia, one of the Irish-American delegates sent to Europe in behalf of the Irish cause, and Daniel F. Cohalan, justice of the Supreme Court of New York, are the three big speakers who will tonight speak in the cause of Ireland at a mass meeting in Mechanics Building under the direction of the Irish Freedom Fund Association.

Colonel Edward L. Logan, leader of the 101st Regiment, A. E. F., and judge of the South Boston Municipal Court, will be chairman. John Morton, chairman of the business men's committee of the organization, will be temporary chairman.

Great interest centres in what Mr. Ryan will report as the result of his experiences in England and France, where he sought in vain to present the cause of Ireland at the peace conference. He will tell of the peace conference from the Irish viewpoint and of the political situation in Ireland and England.

Judge Cohalan will dwell on what he believes the American attitude should be with regard to the independence of Ireland. It is believed he will give the Irish aspect of the latest proposal of the British House of Commons to establish separate Legislatures in Scotland, Ireland and England.

Everybody is invited to the meeting tonight. There will be no tickets of admission, other than a few issued to officers of Irish societies and affiliated organizations. The platform will be reserved for guests, including the mayors of cities of Greater Boston, members of Congress and clergymen.

From 7:30 to 8 there will be a band concert and just before the speaking the audience will sing "The Star Spangled Banner."

The mass meeting has been arranged by a committee including John Morton of Dorchester, chairman; John H. H. McNamee, treasurer of the fund; Daniel Foley, secretary; Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge, Edward F. McSweeney, Attorney Daniel T. O'Connell and James O'Sullivan of Lowell.

EXPECT QUICK ACTION ON SUFFRAGE

State Committee Will Immediately Assign Dates for Hearings

Following hearings which are scheduled within the next few days, lively debates in connection with the ratification of the act of Colgress amending the Federal Constitution to enable women to vote upon all matters are expected. Both the antis' and the suffrage supporters claim victory. Quick action is expected on the measure.

A copy of the resolution, which was transmitted to the legislative Committee on Federal Relations by the Governor without comment, will be immediately taken up by that body and a date assigned shortly for hearings on the measure.

The men on whom rests the future of suffrage in this State are as follows: Senators John Hallowell of New Bedford (chairman), Malcolm E. Nichols of Boston, John Cronin of Holyoke; Representatives Henry Achin, Jr., of Lowell, William P. French of Somerville, George L. Richards of Malden, Ernest A. Larocque of Fall River, John Thomas of Gloucester, Benjamin C. Lane of Boston, William J. Manning of Boston and Daniel J. Hayden of Lynn.

Mrs. Henry Preston White of Brookline asserts that the antis would reach their goal and have the Federal amendment referred to a vote at the Fall elections under the public opinion bill. She stated that it was only fair to democracy that the public should be allowed to at least express their opinion on the subject.

The suffragists, however, through their legislative chairman, Miss Anna Tillinghast, claimed that there was certain victory attending their efforts and the fight of the past 75 years had finally been won.

In discussing the work of yesterday at the State House Miss Tillinghast said: "I have the promise of the majority of the men in the Legislature that they will vote for ratification of the bill."

AMERICA'S RELATIONSHIP TO IRELAND.

The recent resolution in the United States Senate, offered by Senator Walsh, shows a disposition on the part of the senior legislative body to favor self-determination toward the Irish people. This attitude is contrary to the viewpoint of the "Big Four" at Versailles, but will tend to influence the peace conferees to give more respect to Ireland's claims. George Creel's articles on the "Irish Question," running in the Boston Daily American and Sunday Advertiser will prove decidedly enlightening to those who possess no first hand information in the delicate matter.

'BOSTON SHORTY' BELIEVED TO BE PRISONER

Finger Prints Alleged to Identify James Black as Robber in Bangor

Bangor, Me., June 10.—A comparison of finger prints taken in Portland and in Bangor with photographs seems to have proven that James Black, now in jail here awaiting trial for robbery, is the long-famous and much-wanted "Boston Shorty," who has a criminal record running back to 1893 and a string of aliases a yard long, some of them being "James Arnold," "James Bradley" and "James Bludsoe."

The Portland police have been anxious to get hold of "Boston Shorty" for some time, and Sheriff Orman B. Fernandez of Penobscot County, who is an expert in finger printing as well as in other lines of criminal investigation, furnished Captain Herman Haskell of the Portland department with a set of prints with which, on Saturday night, that officer established to his own satisfaction that the man held here is the one wanted.

Black was arrested in Bangor on February 27 by Inspector Knaide, on a charge of highway robbery. He was held in $2,000 for the September criminal term. He has been a quiet prisoner, but the sheriff has regarded him as dangerous and has kept especially close watch upon him. It is said that Black is his real name, and that he is about fifty-five years old, although he looks to be sixty. His first crime, it is said, was an attempt in 1893 at highway robbery, for which he served four years in Dannemora prison. He was arrested at Riverton Park, Portland, in 1915, on charge of conspiracy, and at that time had some burglar's tools and nitro-glycerine. He got one and a half years at Thomaston, and before being sent down was photographed and finger-printed. Another mark of identification is a deep scar across the left index finger. In Portland he was known as "the king of the underworld."

CARMEN REFER DISPUTE TO WAR LABOR BOARD

By a referendum vote of almost seven to one, Boston Carmen's Union last night recorded itself in favor of referring the dispute over wages and hours to the National War Labor Board. The vote stood: In favor, 2,750; against, 401. The question voted on was: "Shall the question of wages and the basic eight-hour day be referred to the National War Labor Board?"

Asks U. S. to Get Out of Europe and Stay Out

Washington, June 10.—Chairman Julius Kahn, of the House military affairs committee, made a plea in presenting to the House the military appropriation bill for [illegible] carrying $[illegible] for the United States "to get out of Europe and stay out."

"Europe does not understand our direct, blunt way of saying things and doing things," he said. "They probably will never understand us and neither will we understand them.

"We want their good will and friendship. We do not want to mix in their quarrels and their rivalries. We want to see them all prosperous and contented.

"If we follow such a course we will retain their respect and friendship and their high regard, where we will maintain, at least, our own self respect as a nation."

LIMIT PICKETS TO 150 IN BIG TOLEDO STRIKE

Toledo, O., June 10.—Not more than 50 pickets can be on duty at one time at the plant of the Willys Overland Company, when work is resumed tomorrow, according to an order issued in the United States District Court. The entire number of pickets on duty during the strike is limited to 150, with a maximum of six stationed at one gate, and all must be citizens of the United States. Picketing will be permitted only from 6 a. m. to 8 p. m. and a deputy United States marshal is to be on duty at each gate.

ARRESTS "AS USUAL" IN BONE DRY BOSTON

Boston may have been "bone dry" after 6 o'clock last night for the [illegible] meeting in Mechanics Building, but there were just as many arrests for intoxication as usual. Police figures show that the total of arrests was about the same as on an average rainy night, due, it is believed, to the policy of certain thirsty souls of "stocking up" just before the six-hour drouth began. The saloons and hotel bars were closed voluntarily by the proprietors who attended the demonstration in Mechanics Building against national prohibition.

SIOUX INDIAN TALKS FOR BOY SCOUTS

Dr. Eastman Chief Speaker at Rally on Common; New England Towns Go Over the Top

Five New Hampshire towns have gone over the top in the Boy Scout national drive to secure 1,000,000 new associate members, according to word received from John B. Jameson of that State today.

Mr. Jameson did not name the towns in question, but at headquarters of the New England campaign it was understood that Concord, N. H., went over half its quota at the end of the first day.

Another development today was the indorsement of the campaign by the Red Cross, through the Boston manager, James Jackson. Other organizations are expected to make similar indorsements.

Dr. Charles E. Eastman, a full-blooded Sioux Indian, was the chief speaker at the noonday rally at Liberty Court on the Common today. George S. Smith, Boston chairman, presided, and Francis Remick, the Massachusetts chairman, was also present.

A troop from the Cambridge council gave a demonstration of scoutcraft at the rally on the Common this noon. Another troop toured the city in a portable bandstand, on which they gave exhibitions of building signal towers, signalling and other scout work. Fifty-five blocks in the down-town section have been organized under the direction of a business man in each block. It is expected in this way to put the business section over inside of two or three days.

New England, under the leadership of James J. Storrow, is to furnish 83,333 members; Massachusetts, under Frank W. Remick, is to furnish 62,499, and Boston, under George S. Smith, president of the City Club, 31,250.

The noon-day rallies will continue throughout the week. Circus talent has been signed up for at least one of these meetings, and the scouts will be on hand with their stunts at every one. Efforts are being made to secure Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., whose father was always an enthusiastic supporter of the scout program.

The scouts themselves are putting their best into insuring the success of the campaign. All day yesterday they were busy distributing posters and mailing literature from the headquarters in Room 234, Old South building, Washington street. Several of them wore on the sleeve of their khaki coats ten or more insignia won by examination in as many sections of scout work, of which there are fifty varieties, ranging from swimming and first aid to sculpture.

QUINCY CITY COUNCIL VOTES FOR SCHOOLHOUSE

After a stormy session of the Quincy City Council it was voted to authorize Mayor Whiton to enter into a contract with the United States Housing Corporation for the construction of a schoolhouse on North street, Quincy Point. It is to be one story, with eighteen class rooms, each room having access to the street. Several sun rooms will be constructed of glass for children in frail health. The finished schoolhouse will be the property of the government, purchasable by the city of Quincy in five years at a price to be based on the assessment at that time.

PLANT STRIKER FINED FOR PROFANE LANGUAGE

George Hamitty, twenty, of Hudson street, Jamaica Plain, one of the strikers at the Thomas Plant shoe factory, was today fined $15 for using profane language to William J. Hayes, a superintendent of the factory. The fine was imposed by Judge Albert F. Hayden in the Roxbury court. The alleged profanity was said to have occurred last evening. Hamitty paid the fine.

MRS. LAWRENCE GITTLESON (Miss Ida Lorraine Gordon), bride of Lawrence Gittleson of Montreal, in pretty wedding at Dorchester Women's Clubhouse.

Ida Gordon Becomes Bride of Montreal Manufacturer

One of the season's prettiest nuptial events was witnessed in the Dorchester Women's Clubhouse, Centre street, Dorchester, when Miss Ida Lorraine Gordon of No. 53 Waverly street, Roxbury, became the bride of Lawrence Gittleson of Montreal.

The maid of honor was Miss Bertha Gordon, a sister of the bride, and assisting in the ceremony as maids were Miss Esther Charak of Brookline, Miss Stella Lee of New Bedford, Miss Frances Kamber of Roxbury, Miss Ethel Levin of New York, Miss Ruth Gittleson of Montreal, sister of the groom, and Miss Mae Lasky of Haverhill.

Alton Gittleson of Montreal was best man and Albert Gordon, a brother of the bride, Emanuel Alberts, Phil Yandes of New York, George Blummenthal of Montreal, Richard Markus of Montreal and Joseph Markoitz of Montreal were ushers.

The bride is one of the most popular young ladies of the city and for a number of years has been very prominent in the activities of the junior council of the Temple Israel and in other charitable organizations. The groom is one of the leading manufacturers of Montreal.

On return from their honeymoon the young couple will spend the summer season at Kenberma, Nantasket. In the Fall they will go to Montreal where they will make their permanent home.

JAMAICA PLAIN BOY HELD IN THEFT OF AUTO

William P. Werner, sixteen, of Lamartine street, Jamaica Plain, in Roxbury Court today, charged with breaking and entering in day time the salesroom of the Cadillac Automobile Company, at 664 Commonwealth avenue, and stealing a Cadillac touring car valued at $3,800, pleaded not guilty. His case was continued to tomorrow. He was held in $1,000 bail. According to the police, entrance was gained to the salesroom last Sunday through a rear window. After an alleged joy ride extending well into the night, the car was found by the police on Lamartine street. When officers went to get another auto to tow the stolen car away, the latter disappeared. It was later located near Brookline Village by the Brookline police with Werner driving it.

Big Vickers Bomber Works Smoothly During Trial Trip

By Universal Service.

St. John's, N. F., June 10.—Captain Alcock and Lieutenant Brown took the Vickers bombing plane up for a trial flight from the Quidi Vidi Field, and after manoeuvring for an hour to test the engines and steering apparatus, landed at the new field near the ropewalk, on the western side of the town, from which Captain Alcock expects to make the "hop off" for the trans-Atlantic flight today, weather conditions permitting.

Captain Alcock said he was well satisfied with the result of the test flight and that he does not consider any further tests necessary.

The Handley-Page machine which is to start from Harbor Grace about the same time as the Vickers has not had a trial flight yet, although the work of assembling has been completed.

The Martinsyde machine, piloted by Captain Raynham, is all ready for the new engine, which has not yet arrived.

Winnipeg, Man., June 10.—Disclosure of the fact that the American Federation of Labor is co-operating with the United States and Canadian Secret Service in an effort to locate agitators in cities along the international boundary line, and a startling statement by the citizens' committee of one thousand, naming an alleged "Red five" executive committee for the strike which it is alleged was chosen at the I. W. W. convention in Calgary, last March, were the outstanding features today of the Winnipeg strike situation.

OGIRLS TAKE BONUS FIGHT TO SENATE

ustify Claim for $100 Award in Letter, Will Attend Hearing

The Yeomen (F) of the First Naval District will carry their fight to be included in the State Bonus of $100 to the Senate. At the hearing in the State House on Wednesday a delegation of their number under the leadership of Miss May G. Hurley will be there to state their claims and present the action of the State Branch of the American Legion which unanimously voted in favor of their inclusion in the bill.

They will also present copies of letters from the Navy Department, the commandant of the First Naval District, commandant of the Boston Navy Yard, and from the Adjutant-General of Massachusetts, in which they have been commended for efficiency and attentiveness.

A letter giving the reasons why they claim this award, together with copies of an editorial which appeared in the Boston American, and copies of a newspaper story of an interview with Admiral Wood, in which he stated "The Yeomen (F) have worked like ——" have been sent to each member of the Senate.

Following is the letter which was sent to the Senators:

Whereas your honorable body has under consideration at this time the bill calling for an appropriation for a bonus for citizens of Massachusetts who served in the great world war, and,

Whereas, we the yeomen (F) of the United States Naval Reserve Force, have been omitted from the benefits of the provision of this bill and the so-called bonus, and,

Whereas, we are of the belief that if the gentlemen of the Massachusetts Legislature understood fully the actual circumstances and conditions under which the yeomen (F) served that they would not hesitate to include the said yeomen (F) in the provisions of the said bill, we have resolved to set forth the following facts for your careful consideration:

1. Yeomen (F) enrolled for a term of four years. They were assigned to duty for the duration of the war. They can be recalled to duty any time during the four years in case of another war as a great national emergency.
2. Yeomen (F) were compelled to submit to vaccination (cowpox) and inoculation (typhoid prophylactic).
3. Yeomen (F) were required to wear a regulation uniform at all times while on duty.
4. Yeomen (F) were subject to be sent at any time to any station within the First District.
5. Yeomen (F) were obliged to comply with Navy rules and regulations.
6. Yeomen (F), although not required, could and did volunteer for duty in other districts, and quite a few from the First District are serving at the following places: Washington, D. C.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Norfolk, Va.; Ashville, N. C.; Great Lakes, Illinois; New London, Ct., and other places.
7. Yeomen (F) volunteered for foreign duty, but the Navy Department disapproved their requests.
8. Yeomen (F) assumed the risks and dangers of their positions. Although on shore stations there was always the possibility that the building where they were stationed would be blown up by an alien enemy.
9. Yeomen (F) offered their services from purely patriotic motives and were obliged to pass a strict mental and physical examination before they could be enrolled. Most of the yeomen (F) had brothers, and some had husbands in the service and wanted to do their share in helping out.
10. Yeomen (F) released a large number of men for sea duty and thus augmented the fighting strength of the navy.
11. Yeomen (F) relinquished good positions in order that they might serve. Their positions have been filled and yeomen (F) are daily being released from active duty, many of them having no position to go to on account of present business conditions.
12. Yeomen (F) it is true, received good wages, but not any more than many girls earned in munition factories and elsewhere. Women in civilian capacities such as civil service and business received increases in salaries until their wages were almost equal to that received by yeomen (F), and they were not under restriction and regulation as were the latter.
13. Yeomen (F) were subject to call to duty at any time during the day or night, and often were obliged to stand watch on Sundays. There were no specified hours. All important work to be finished as soon as possible. Yeomen (F) worked on the night watch all during the war, relieving those who had worked on the day watch.
14. Yeomen (F) who volunteered for duty in other districts, particularly Washington, were obliged to undergo considerable hardship due to conditions that existed in those places.
15. Yeomen (F) have often been criticised and ridiculed, but generally by people who were misinformed or whose opinions were founded on rumors or reports circulated by jealous individuals. For a complete refutation of these criticisms and rumors we refer you to the naval authorities, who alone are in a position to judge as to the ability and character of the yeomen (F). All these insinuations we have withstood patiently, although our slanderers not only insulted us but the uniform which we wore and the country which we served.
16. Yeomen (F), the majority of them, have potential dependents, and many of them have real dependents.

Therefore, in view of the facts heretofore enumerated, we, the yeomen (F) of the United States Naval Reserve Force, residents of Massachusetts, do hereby petition and request that we be included in the provisions of the bill providing for a bonus for those who served in the army, navy or marine corps during the great world war.

CZECH ARTIST AND HIS STUDENTS IN RECITAL

Much interest is being shown among the music lovers of Boston in the "Musical Evening" to be given by Emanuel Ondricek, the well known Czech artist, in Jordan Hall tonight. Ondricek is endeavoring to demonstrate the musical culture of the new Czecho Slovak republic, whose heroic soldiers fighting in the ranks of the Allies attracted a universal admiration for their exploits on the fields of battle. His students, assisted by members of the Boston Symphony, McDowell Club and New England Conservatory orchestras, will play among other numbers, Suk's "Serenade" for string orchestra, which has never been performed in this country.

FISH HANDLERS GIVEN RAISE; STRIKE CALLED OFF

A strike of nearly 200 fish handlers employed at the South Boston fish pier was averted by the decision of certain companies to reconsider their refusal to grant increases in pay recently recommended by the National War Labor Board. In its recent findings the board awarded substantial additions to the wages of members of this trade. Employes receiving less than $25 per week were given a 15 per cent increase, while those getting $25 or more weekly were allowed an extra 10 per cent, with piece work a like increase and overtime to be paid at the rate of 75 cents an hour.

JUMPS FROM SKIFF TO RESCUE THREE BOYS

New Bedford, June 10.—Moise Sansoucy, No. 1 Coffin avenue, leaped from his skiff into the waters of the Acushnet River here and saved three boys from drowning. The lads were unable to row a boat and their frail craft was caught in the swift current and crashed against the supports of the Coggeshall street bridge. Only two of them could swim, and Sansoucy, who had witnessed the accident, jumped overboard and swam to their assistance. He managed to effect the rescue of all three.

Filene's

Uncle Sam speaks!

DURING the late war, the United States government in general and the Treasury Department in particular took great interest in the financial affairs and the financial welfare of the American public. The end of the war did not end the government's interest in public and private finance. Nor should the war end thrift.

From a recent United States Government Treasury Bulletin

> "Upon the work done during the past two years, merchants who desire to transform their business to the all-cash basis can safely build. The Thrift Campaign has led the whole American public to think as never before. They have learned that charge accounts and instalment purchases involve additional expense to merchants which can only be paid by customers, and are taking steps to reduce such expenses. They know that by patronizing stores that sell for cash only, or make a tangible distinction between cash sales and credit sales, they may hand money over the counter and avoid sharing the burden imposed by credit customers."

But thrift today means not abstaining from spending (as it did during the war); rather it now means WISE SPENDING and getting the MOST FOR YOUR MONEY.

This the Treasury Department is doing much to encourage. As a part of this and other work it issues Treasury Bulletins.

"The American public . . . . . have learned that charge accounts and instalment purchases involve additional expense to merchants which can only be paid by customers . . . . . they know that by patronizing stores that sell for cash only or make a tangible distinction between cash sales and credit sales, ... they avoid sharing the burden."

THE underscores are ours. We have underscored these lines because the Treasury Department has hit the Filene nail squarely on the head. So far as we know this is the only large store which makes a tangible difference between cash sales and credit sales."

The Filene store, due to its policy of charging for service, has become a store with the low price advantages of a cash store and the convenience of a charge-account store. It is a happy combination. To cash customers it offers rock bottom prices. To charge customers it offers all the advantages of trading in a cash store, PLUS as much or as little service as they desire!

HERE you buy merchandise—OR you buy merchandise plus service. You may buy one or both, but you are not asked to pay for both when you only want one!

NOTHING that we have done has been aimed at discouraging charge accounts. As a matter of record we are daily opening new accounts and reopening old ones which have been closed, as our customers find out that they can buy to better advantage on the new basis.

We believe that indiscriminate service is wasteful and so does the United States Government. We believe a store can operate more economically and give its customers lower prices when it separates the cost of service from the cost of merchandise.

IN FACT, we know these things are so, for we have proved during the first six months of this plan that the Filene store is serving its customers better—not part of them but ALL of them. We believe that BOTH our cash customers and our charge customers have benefited by the change; a change, in general, to which the United States Government now lends its official approval.

What Has Happened So Far in the Story

Francis Morgan, a young New York millionaire, heavily interested in oil, meets Alvarez Torres, an adventurer, in the Wall Street offices of Thomas Regan, who has an old score to pay off against Francis' father. Torres tells Francis he has the key to the hidden treasure of Sir Henry Morgan, the buccaneer. Francis goes to Central America in quest of the cache, Torres agreeing to follow. The young man meets Leoncia Solano, who mistakes him for her fiance, Henry Morgan. Francis meets Henry, who tells him he is suspected wrongfully of killing Leoncia's uncle. Francis goes back to the girl, explains and returns the engagement ring she had given back to Henry. Torres, who is at the Solano hacienda, sees Francis give Leoncia the ring and is infuriated. He contrives to have Francis arrested, and when he is freed through the arrival of Henry, the latter is put in jail. Torres declares his love for Leoncia, but plots to have Henry hanged and Francis killed. Leoncia and the Solanos blow up the jail and Henry escapes with Francis, Leoncia and the Solanos to the schooner. Torres pursues. Fleeing to the Cordilleras, Francis and his party are captured by Torres and his retainers. Coming to the cavern of the Blind Brigand, the prisoners appeal to him for justice.

The theme of this story was suggested to the author by Charles W. Goddard.

DESPITE his blindness, that ever veiled the apparent face of the world in invisibility, he was a man of action, and his soul was anything but blind, penetrating unerringly beneath the show of things to the heart and the soul of the world and reading its inmost sins and rapacities and noblenesses and virtues.

He lifted his hand and put a pause in the reading, while he thought aloud from the context of the reading.

"The law of man," he said with slow certitude, "is today a game of wits. Not equity, but wit, is the game of law today. The law in its inception was good; but the way of the law, the practice of it, has led men off into false pursuits. They have mistaken the way for the goal, the means for the end. Yet is law law, and necessary, and good. Only law, in its practice today, has gone astray.

"Judges and lawyers engage in competitions and affrays of wit and learning, quite forgetting the plaintiffs and defendants, before them and paying them, who are seeking equity and justice and not wit and learning.

"Yet is old Blackstone right. Under it all, at the bottom of it all, at the beginning of the building of the edifice of the law, is the quest, the earnest and sincere quest of righteous men for justice and equity. But what is it that the Preacher said? 'They made themselves many inventions.'

"And the law, good in its beginning, has been invented out of all its intent, so that it serves neither litigants nor injured ones, but merely the fatted judges and the lean and hungry lawyers who achieve names and paunches if they prove themselves cleverer than their opponents and the judges who render decision."

He paused, still posed as Rodin's "Thinker," and meditated, while the mestiza woman waited his customary signal to resume the reading. At last, as out of a profound thought, in which universes had been weighed in the balance, he spoke:

Not the Lamp.

"But we have law here in the Cordilleras of Panama that is just and right and all of equity. We work for no man and serve not even paunches. Sackcloth and not broadcloth conduces to equity of judicial decision. Read on, Mercedes. Blackstone is always right if always rightly read—which is what is called a paradox, and is what modern law ordinarily is, a paradox. Read on. Blackstone is the very foundation of human law—but, oh, how many wrongs are committed by clever men in his name!"

Ten minutes later the blind thinker raised his head, sniffed the air, and gestured the girl to pause. Taking her cue from him, she, too, sniffed:

"Perhaps it is the lamp, O Just One," she suggested.

"It is burning oil," he said. "But it is not the lamp. It is from far away. Also, have I heard shooting in the canyons."

"I heard nothing"——she began.

"Daughter, you who see have not the need to hear that I have. There have been many shots fired in the canyons. Order my children to investigate and make report."

Bowing reverently to the old man who could not see, but who, by keen trained hearing and conscious timing of her every muscular action, knew that she had bowed, the young woman lifted the curtain of blankets and passed out into the day. At either side of the cave mouth sat a man of the peon class. Each was armed with rifle and machette, while through their girdles were thrust naked bladed knives.

At the girl's order, both arose and bowed, not to her, but to the command and the invisible source of the command. One of them tapped the back of his machette against the stone upon which he had been sitting, then laid his ear to the stone and listened. In truth, the stone was but the out-jut of a vein of metalliferous ore that extended across and through the heart of the mountain.

And beyond on the opposite slope, in an eyrie commanding the magnificent panorama of the descending slopes of the Cordilleras, sat another peon who first listened with his ear pressed to similar metalliferous quartz, and next tapped response with his machette. After that, he stepped half a dozen paces to a tall tree, half dead, reached into the hollow heart of it, and pulled on the rope within as a man might pull who was ringing a steeple bell.

No Sound

But no sound was evoked. Instead a lofty branch, fifty feet above his head sticking out from the main trunk like a semaphore arm, moved up and down like the semaphore arm it was. Two miles away, on a mountain crest, the branch of a similar semaphore tree replied.

Still beyond that, and further down the slopes, the flashing of a hand mirror in the sun heliographed the relaying of the blind man's message from the cave. And all that portion of the Cordilleras became voluble with coded speech of vibrating ore veins, sun flashings and waving tree branches.

While Enrico Solano, slenderly erect on his horse as an Indian youth and conveyed on either side by his sons, Alesandro and Ricardo, hanging to his saddle trappings, made the best of the time afforded them by Francis' rearguard battle with the gendarmes, Leoncia, on her mount, and Henry Morgan lagged behind. One or the other was continually glancing back for the sight of Francis overtaking them.

Watching his opportunity, Henry took the back-trail. Five minutes afterward Leoncia, no less anxious than he for Francis' safety, tried to turn her horse about. But the animal, eager for the companionship of its mate ahead, refused to obey therein, cut up and pranced and deliberately settled into a balk.

Dismounting and throwing her reins on the ground in the Panamanian method of tethering a saddle horse, Leoncia took the back-trail on foot. So rapidly did she follow Henry that she was almost treading on his heels when he encountered Francis and the peon. The next moment both Henry and Francis were chiding her for her conduct, but in both their voices was the involuntary tenderness of love, which pleased neither to hear the other uttering.

An Untoward Circumstance

Their hearts more active than their heads, they were caught in total surprise by the party of haciendados that dashed out upon them with covering rifles from the surrounding jungle. Despite the fact that they had thus captured the runaway peon, whom they proceeded to kick and cuff, all would have been well with Leoncia and the two Morgans had the owner of the peon, the old-time friend of the Salano family, been present. But an attack of the malarial fever, which was his due every third day, had stretched him out in a chill near the burning oil field.

Nevertheless, though by their blows they reduced the peon to weepings and pleadings on his knees, the haciendados were courteously gentle to Leoncia and quite decent to Francis and Henry, even though they tied the hands of the latter two behind them in preparation for the march up the ravine slope to where the horses had been left. But upon the peon, with Latin-American cruelty, they continued to reiterate their rage.

Yet were they destined to arrive nowhere, by themselves, with their captives. Shouts of joy heralded the debouchment upon the scene of the Jefe's gendarmes and of the Jefe and Alvarez Torres. Arose at once the rapid-fire staccato man of both parties of pursuers trying to explain and demanding explanation at one and the same time.

And while the barrage of all talking simultaneously and of no one winning anywhere in understanding made anarchy of speech, Torres, with a nod to Francis and a sneer of triumph to Henry, ranged before Leoncia and bowed low to her in true and deep hidalgo courtesy and respect.

"Listen!" he said, low-voiced, as she rebuffed him with an arm movement of repulsion. "Do not misunderstand me. Do not mistake me. I am here to save you, and, no matter what may happen, to protect you. You are the lady of my dreams. I will die for you—yes, and gladly, though far more gladly would I live for you."

"I do not understand," she replied curtly. "I do not see life or death in the issue. We have done no wrong. I have done no wrong, nor has my father. Nor has Francis Morgan, nor has Henry Morgan. Therefore, sir, the matter is not a question of life or death."

Henry and Francis, shouldering close to Leonica, on either side, listened and caught through the hubble-bubble of many voices the conversation of Leonica and Torres.

"It is a question absolute of certain death by execution for Henry Morgan," Torres persisted. "Proven beyond doubt in his conviction for the murder of Alfaro Solano, who was your own full-blood uncle and your father's own full-blood brother. There is no chance to save Henry Morgan. But Francis Morgan can I save in all surety, if"——

"If?" Leonica queried, with almost the snap of jaws of a she-leopard.

His Condition

"If you prove kind to me, and marry me," Torres said with magnificent steadiness, although two gringos, helpless, their hands tied behind their backs, glared at him through their eyes their common desire for his immediate extinction.

Torres, in a genuine outburst of his passion, through his rapid glances had assured him of the helplessness of the two Morgans, seized her hands in his and urged:

"Leoncia, as your husband I might be able to do something for Henry. Even may it be possible for me to save his life and his neck, if he will yield to leaving Panama immediately."

"You Spanish dog!" Henry snarled at him, struggling with his tied hands behind his back in an effort to free them.

"Gringo cur!" Torres retorted, as, with an open-back-handed blow, he struck Henry on the mouth.

On the instant Henry's foot shot out, and the kick in Torres' side drove him staggering in the direction of Francis, who was no less quick with a kick of his own. Back and forth like a shuttlecock between the battledores, Torres was kicked from one man to the other, until the gendarmes seized the two gringos and began to beat them in their helplessness. Torres not only urged the gendarmes on, but himself drew a knife; and red tragedy might have happened with offended Latin-American blood up and raging, had not a score or more of armed men silently appeared and silently taken charge of the situation. Some of the mysterious newcomers were clad in cotton singlets and trousers, and others were in cowled gabardines of sackcloth.

The gendarmes and haciendados recoiled in fear, crossing themselves, muttering prayers and ejaculating: "The Blind Brigand!" "The Cruel Just One!" "They are his people!" "We are lost!"

But the much beaten peon sprang forward and fell on his bleeding knees before a stern-faced man who appeared to be the leader of the Blind Brigand's men. From the mouth of the peon poured forth a stream of loud lamentation and outcry for justice.

"You know that justice to which you appeal?" The leader spoke gutturally.

"Yes, the Cruel Justice," the peon replied. "I know what it means to appeal to the Cruel Justice, yet do I appeal, for I seek justice and my cause is just."

"I, too, demand the Cruel Justice!" Leoncia cried, with flashing eyes, although she added in an undertone to Francis and Henry: "Whatever the Cruel Justice is."

"It will have to go some to be unfairer than the justice we can expect from Torres and the Jefe," Henry replied in similar undertones, then stepped forward boldly before the cowled leader and said loudly: "And I demand the Cruel Justice."

The leader nodded.

The Jefe Objects

"Me, too," Francis murmured low, and then made loud demand.

The gendarmes did not seem to count in the matter, while the haciendados signified their willingness to abide by whatever justice the Blind Brigand might mete out to them. Only the Jefe objected.

"Maybe you don't know who I am," he blustered. "I am Mariano Vacara y Hijos, of long illustrious name and long and honorable career. I am Jefe Politico of San Antonio, the highest friend of the Governor, and high in the confidence of the government of the Republic of Panama. I am the law. There is but one law, and one justice, which is of Panama and not the Cordilleras. I protest against this mountain law you call the Cruel Justice. I shall send an army against your Blind Brigand, and the buzzards will pick his bones in San Juan."

"Remember," Torres sarcastically warned the irate Jefe, "that this is not San Antonio, but the bush of Juchitan. Also, you have no army."

"Have these two men been unjust to any one who has appealed to the Cruel Justice?" the leader asked abruptly.

"Yes," asseverated the peon. "They have beaten me and without cause. My head is bloody. My body is bruised and torn. Again I appeal to the Cruel Justice, and I charge these two men with injustice."

The leader nodded and to his own indicated the disarming of the prisoners and the order to march.

"Justice—I demand equal justice!" Henry cried out. "My hands are tied behind my back. All hands should be so tied, or no hands be so tied. Besides, it is very difficult to walk when one is so tied."

The shadow of a smile drifted on the lips of the leader as he directed his men to cut the lashings that invidiously advertised the inequality complained of.

"Huh!" Francis grinned to Leoncia and Henry. "I have a vague memory that somewhere around a million years ago I used to live in a quiet old burg named New York, where we foolishly thought we were the wildest and wickedest that ever cracked at a golf ball, electrocuted an inspector of police, battled with Tammany or bid four nullos with five sure tricks in one's own hand."

"Huh!" Henry vouchsafed half an hour later, as the trail from a lesser crest afforded a view of higher crests beyond. "Huh! and hell's bells! These gunny-sack chaps are not animals or savages. Look, Henry! They are semaphoring! See that near tree there, and that big one across the canyon. Watch the branches wave."

* * *

Blindfolded for a number of miles at the last, the prisoners, still blindfolded, were led into the cave where the Cruel Justice reigned. When the bandages were removed, they found themselves in a vast and lofty cavern, lighted by many torches, and confronting them, a blind and white-haired man in sack-cloth seated on a rock-hewn throne, with, beneath him, her shoulder at his knees, a pretty mestiza woman.

The blind man spoke and his voice was the thin and bell-like silver of age and weary wisdom.

"The Cruel Justice has been invoked. Speak! Who demands decision and equity?"

All held back, and not even the Jefe could summon heart of courage to protest against Cordilleras law.

"There is a woman present," continued the Blind Brigand. "Let her speak first. All mortal men and women are guilty of something or else are charged by their fellows with some guilt."

Leoncia Goes Forward

Henry and Francis were for withstraining her, but with an equal smile to them she addressed the Cruel Just One in clear and ringing tones:

"I only have aided the man I am engaged to marry to escape from death for murder he did not commit."

"You have spoken," said the Blind Brigand. "Come forward to me."

Piloted by sackcloth men, while the two Morgans who loved her were restless and perturbed, she was made to kneel at the blind man's knees. The mestiza girl placed his hand on Leoncia's head. For a full and solemn minute silence obtained, while the steady fingers of the Blind One rested about her forehead and registered the pulse-beats of her temples. Then he removed his hand and leaned back to decision.

"Arise, Senorita," he pronounced. "Your heart is clean of evil. You go free. Who else appeals to the Cruel Justice?"

Francis immediately stepped forward.

"I likewise helped the man to escape from an undeserved death. The man and I are of the same name, and distantly of the same blood."

He, too, knelt, and felt the soft finger-lobes play delicately over his brows and temples and come to rest finally on the pulse of his wrist.

"It is not all clear to me," said the Blind One. "You are not at rest or at peace with your soul. There is trouble within you that vexes you."

Suddenly the peon stepped forth and spoke unbidden, his voice evoking a thrill as of the shock of blasphemy from the sackcloth man.

"Oh, Just One, let this man go," said the peon passionately. "Twice was I weak and betrayed him to his enemy and twice this day has he protected me from my enemy and saved me."

The Trouble Within

And the peon, once again on his knees, but this time at the knees of justice, thrilled and shivered with superstitious awe, as he felt wander over him the light but firm finger-touches of the strangest judge man ever knelt before. Bruises and lacerations were swiftly explored, even the shoulders and down the back.

"The other man goes free," the Cruel One announced. "Yet there is trouble and unrest within him. Is one here who knows and will speak up?"

And Francis knew on the instant the trouble the blind man had divined within him—the full love that turned in him for Leoncia and that threatened to shatter the full loyalty he must ever bear to Henry.

No less quick was Leoncia in knowing, and could the blind man have beheld the involuntary glance of knowledge the man and woman threw at each other and the immediate embarrassment of averted eyes he could have unerringly diagnosed Francis' trouble. The mestiza girl saw, and with a leap at her heart scented a love affair. Likewise had Henry seen and unconsciously scowled.

The Just One spoke:

"An affair of heart undoubtedly," he dismissed the matter. "The eternal vexation of woman in the heart of man. Nevertheless, this stands free. Twice, in the one day, has he succored the man who twice betrayed him. Nor has the trouble within him aught to do with the aid he rendered the man said to be sentenced to death undeserved.

"Remains to question this last man; also to settle for this beaten creature before me who twice this day has proved weak out of selfishness, and who has just now proved bravely strong out of unselfishness for another."

He leaned forward and played his fingers searchingly over the face and brows of the peon.

"Are you afraid to die?" he asked suddenly.

"Great and Holy One, I am sore afraid to die," was the peon's reply.

"Then say that you have lied about this man; say that his twice succoring of you was a lie, and you shall live."

Under the Blind One's fingers the peon cringed and wilted.

"Think well," came the solemn warning. "Death is not good. To be forever unmoving, as the clod and rock, is not good. Say that you have lied and life is yours. Speak!"

But, although his voice shook from the exquisiteness of his fear, the peon rose to the full spiritual stature of a man.

"Twice this day did I betray him, Holy One. But my name is not Peter. Not thrice in this day will I betray him. I am sore afraid, but I cannot betray him thrice."

The blind judge leaned back and his face beamed and glowed as if transfigured.

"Well spoken," he said. "You have the makings of a man. I now lay my sentence upon you: From now on, through all your days under the sun, you shall always think like a man, act like a man, be a man. Better to die a man any time, than live a beast forever in time. The Ecclesiast was wrong. A dead lion is always better than a live dog. Go free, regenerate son; go free."

But as the peon at a signal from the mestiza, started to rise, the blind judge stopped him.

"In the beginning, O man, who but this day has been born man, what was the cause of all your troubles?"

"My heart was weak and hungry, O Holy One, for a mixed-breed woman of the tierra caliente. I myself am mountain born. For her I put myself in debt to the hacienda, for the sum of two hundred pesos. She fled with the money and another man. I remained the slave of the haciendado, who is not a bad man, but who, first and always, is a haciendado.

"I have toiled, been beaten, and have suffered for five long years, and my debt is now become two hundred and fifty pesos, and yet I possess naught but these rags and a body weak from insufficient food."

The Woman Wonderful

"Was she wonderful?—this woman of the terra caliente?" the blind judge queried softly.

"I was mad for her, Holy One. I do not think now that she was wonderful. But she was wonderful then. The fever of her burned my heart and brain and made a task slave of me, though she fled in the night and I knew her never again."

The peon waited, on his knees, with bowed head, while to the amazement of all the Blind Brigand sighed deeply and seemed to forget time and place. His hand strayed involuntarily and automatically to the head of the mestiza, caressed the shining black hair and continued to caress it while he spoke.

"The woman," he said, with such gentleness that his voice, still clear and bell-like, was barely a whisper. "Ever the woman wonderful. All women are wonderful—to man. They love our fathers; they birth us; we love them; they birth our sons to love their daughters and to call their daughters wonderful; and this has always been and shall continue always to be until the end of man's time and man's loving on earth."

A profound of silence fell within the cavern, while the Cruel One meditated for a space. At the last, with a touch dared of familiarity, the pretty mestiza touched him and roused him to remembrance of the peon still crouching at his feet.

"I pronounce judgment," he spoke. "You have received many blows. Each blow on your body is quittance in full of the entire debt to the haciendado. Go free. But remain in the mountains, and next time love a mountain woman, since woman you must have, and since woman is inevitable and eternal in the affairs of men. Go free. You are half Maya?"

"I am half Maya," the peon murmured. "My father is a Maya."

"Arise and go free. And remain in the mountains with your Maya father. The tierra caliente is no place for the Cordilleras-born. The haciendado is not present, and therefore cannot be judged. And after all he is but a haciendado. His fellow-haciendados, too, go free."

The Cruel Just One waited, and, without waiting, Henry stepped forward.

"I am the man," he stated boldly, "sentenced to the death undeserved for the killing of a man I did not kill. He was the blood-uncle of the girl I love, whom I shall marry if there be true justice here in this cave in the Cordilleras."

But the Jefe interrupted.

"Before a score of witnesses he threatened to his face to kill the man. Within the hour we found him bending over the man's dead body that was yet warm and limber with departing life."

"He speaks true," Henry affirmed. "I did threaten the man, both of us heady from strong drink and hot blood. I was so found, bending over his dead warm body. Yet I did not kill him. Nor do I know, nor can I guess, the coward hand in the dark that knifed out his life through the back from behind."

"Kneel, both of you, that I may interrogate you," the Blind Brigand commanded.

I Love Her

Long he interrogated with his sensitive, questioning fingers. Long, and still longer, unable to attain decision, his fingers played over the faces and pulses of the two men.

"Is there a woman?" he asked Henry Morgan pointedly.

"A woman wonderful. I love her."

"It is good to be so vexed, for a man unvexed by a woman is only half a man," the blind judge vouchsafed. He addressed the Jefe. "No woman vexes you, yet are you troubled. But this man"—indicating Henry—"I cannot tell if all his vexation is due to woman. Perhaps, in part, it may be due to you, or to what some prompting of evil may make him meditate against you. Stand up, both men of you. I cannot judge between you. Yet is there the test infallible, the test of the Snake and the Bird. Infallible it is, as God is infallible, for by such ways does God still maintain truth in the affairs of men. As well does Blackstone mention just such methods of determining the truth by trial and ordeal."

CHAPTER XI.

TO all intents it might have been a tiny bull-ring, that pit in the heart of the Blind Brigand's domain. Ten feet in depth and thirty in diameter, with level floor and perpendicular wall, its natural formation had required little work at the hands of man to complete its symmetry. The sackcloth men, the haciendados, the gendarmes—all were present, save for the Cruel Just One and the mestiza, and all were lined about the rim of the pit, as an audience to gaze down upon some bullfight or gladiatorial combat within the pit.

At command of the stern-faced leader of the sackcloth men who had captured them, Henry and the Jefe descended down a short ladder into the pit. The leader and several of the brigands accompanied them.

"Heaven alone knows what's going to happen," Henry laughed up in English to Leoncia and Francis. "But if it's rough and tumble, bite and gouge, or Marquis of Queensbury, or London prize ring, Mister Fat Jefe is my meat. But that old blind one is clever, and the chances are he's going to put us at each other on some basis of evenness. In which case do you, my audience, if he gets me down, stick your thumbs up and make all the noise you can. Depend upon it, if it's he that's down, all his crowd will be thumbs up."

The Jefe, overcome by the trap into which he descended, in Spanish addressed the leader.

"I shall not fight with this man. He is younger than I and has better wind. Also the affair is illegal. It is not according to the law of the Republic of Panama. It is extra-territorial and entirely unjudicial."

"It is the Snake and the Bird," the leader shut them off. "You shall be the Snake. This rifle shall be in your hands. The other man shall be the Bird. In his hand shall be the bell. Behold! Thus may you may understand the ordeal."

At this command, one of the brigands was given the rifle and was blindfolded. To another brigand, not blindfolded, was given a silver bell.

"The man with the rifle is the Snake," said the leader. "He has one shot at the Bird who carries the bell."

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

Soap should be used very carefully if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—Advertisement.

MAROON 16,000 VETERANS AT DEVENS

Discharge Delayed for Weeks Through Failure to Provide Transportation Home

Camp Devens, Ayer, June 10.—Headquarters here is dismayed at the serious situation on its hands. More than 16,000 overseas troops are billeted in the cantonment today, several thousands more are expected to arrive shortly and no adequate transportation facilities have seemingly been provided by the War Department to take the war-weary service men back to their homes.

Demobilizing the large number of men is a minor factor in the situation. Devens established the record for demobilization when it discharged 7,000 of the 26th Division in one day and more than 9,000 on the next.

MEN HELD BEFORE.

The situation is a repetition of that which existed several months ago, when men reaching here from France were detained in camp for nearly two weeks for no other reason than that there were no troop cars assigned to the camp for their transportation away from here.

It is expected that 690 men of the 313th Machine Gun Battalion will leave here today for Camp Dix, and that about 1,000 men of the 358th Infantry will get away for Camp Bowie in Texas by tomorrow. But the departure of this number is only a drop in the bucket, and its size implies that Washington will be two weeks or more in moving the total number now here.

"It looks," said one officer, "as though the powers that be in Washington don't know that the men have arrived here. Recently we had a telegram from the War Department stating that, though it had not been expected to send more than 3,000 men a week to this camp for demobilization, they would send us 4,200 men in the week of June 7.

"They asked us if we would need any additional help to handle this number. Now they send us 16,000 men in four days. We don't need any more officers or men to get them out, but we do need cars to send them away in. We can't make them walk home. Despite the efforts of our transportation officers and repeated notices and requests from headquarters we cannot get the cars."

CLAIM DISCRIMINATION.

Some officers, a number of whom are from New England, openly charge that Devens is being discriminated against in Washington, and that efforts are being made to discredit the New England cantonment's organization.

Every man of the 400 officers and 7,488 enlisted personnel who arrived in Boston on the General Grant and Winifredian is eager to get back home. Already they are going through the delousing operations.

Adding to the anxiety of headquarters about the situation is the official report that another transport carrying 7,000 men has been diverted to Boston.

Most of the recent arrivals are engineers of the 21st, 23rd, 504th, 510th and 520th engineer regiments. Practically all are from the 90th Division and tell wonderful stories of their experiences, that include high praise of the two full companies of American Indians in their outfit.

FIRE ENGINE SMASHES WINDOW TO AVOID GIRLS

Blunt, rector of All Saints' Church, Peabody square, and a girl friend escaped serious injury when Engine 18 crashed into the Blunt automobile at the junction of Washington and Harvard streets, Dorchester. In attempting to save the occupants of the auto, Driver James M. McQuade swung the horses abruptly and they smashed the plate glass window of Maspero Brothers' store on Bowdoin avenue.

ATTORNEY NOXON JOINS DEFENCE FOR MRS. DUNNE

Pittsfield, June 10.—Former District Attorney John F. Noxon of the firm of Noxon & Eisner has become associated with former Senator Thomas F. Cassidy of Adams for the defence of Mrs. Gladys C. Dunn, wife of the author, J. Allan Dunn, at the July sitting of Superior Court here.

The charge is infanticide in connection with the death of her son, J. Allan Dunn, Jr., from a gunshot wound last July at their Lenox home.

FREIGHTER DELAWARE TOWED IN, DISABLED

The freight steamer Delaware of the Metropolitan line was towed into Boston port twenty-four hours late. Off Point Judith, R. I., the freighter was disabled when the propeller caught the line of a passing towboat. The Delaware's plight was discovered by the tug Pawnee on the way from Boston to New York.

STEALS $15,000 IN JEWELS AS WOMAN SLEEPS

New York, June 10.—A porch climber stole jewelry valued at $15,000 from the New Rochelle home of Lucius N. Littauer, former representative in Congress.

The thief entered Mrs. Littauer's room while she slept and escaped with her jewel box, containing gems worth that sum, according to the information.

SUES "EL" FOR $5,000, JURY AWARDS ONE CENT

One cent was awarded by a Suffolk County jury to Joseph Ernest of Boston, a shoeworker at the Plant shoe factory, in his suit against the Boston Elevated to recover $5,000 in damages. He claimed, on December 14, 1917, he was injured in a collision of street cars in the Pleasant street subway between Boylston and Pleasant streets.

ARREST ROXBURY MAN FOR MICHIGAN BREAK

Stephen Shaughnessy of Roxbury is under arrest in Kalamazoo, Mich., charged with robbing a jewelry store. Shaughnessy, who claims to be an ex-Secret Service employe, is wanted in Boston, where he is under indictment for the larceny of an automobile.

BUILD OR LIVE IN TENTS, WARNS BANKER

President Martin of Exchange Trust Company Predicts Big Shortage of Houses

"Unless an enormous amount of building is done immediately throughout New England, people will be living in tents this Fall," said John J. Martin, president of the Exchange Trust Company of Boston in a speech before the members of the Lynn Real Estate Exchange.

"There has been practically no building for the past three years," continued Mr. Martin, "and at the same time our population has increased enormously. When people come back from the seashores and country there is going to be a veritable 'home panic' unless in the meantime houses have been built to accommodate them.

"BUILD NOW—IMMEDIATELY."

"We must build now—immediately. It is wrong to wait for prices to come down, for prices are not going to come down. Carpenters are going to get more money rather than less. Labor is certain to cost more as time goes on. Materials will maintain their high price standard. Now is the time to build.

"The ideal citizen is the man who owns his own home—not the carpetbagger who is here today and off tomorrow. The present rent-payer had best take warning, for with the abnormal demand to come for apartments, his rent is going to mount to the sky. If he is wise he will buy a vacant lot somewhere and then when the crash comes he will have built himself a home where nobody can raise the rent.

HIGH WAGES TO CONTINUE.

"It is far better for a man to invest his money in a piece of real estate that he can see than in the thousand and one stock propositions that are offered to the public. Yet infinitely more money is put weekly into alluring stock propositions than into real estate.

"Better times are coming and high wages are to continue. Within six months there will be a labor shortage. There will be a general resumption of all business as soon as the peace treaty is signed and reconstruction plans are completed here and abroad.

"There is to be the biggest demand in history for goods of nearly every sort. But if the demand returns merely to normal there will be a labor shortage even then, for normal demand means a normal labor demand.

Corns Peel Off Painlessly

There's only one happy way to get rid of any corn or callus, and that's the painless-peel-off way. "Gets-It" is the only corn remedy in the world that does it that way—effectively, thoroughly. Why get down on the floor, tie yourself up into a knot and have to fool with "packagey" pasters, greasy ointments that rub off, sticky tape and digging knives and scissors, when you can peel off your corn or callus in one complete piece, peacefully and surely, with magic, simple, easy "Gets-It?" It takes 2 or 3 seconds to apply "Gets-It"; you use 2 or 3 drops, and that's all. "Gets-It" does the rest! Get rid of that corn-pain at once so that you can work and play without corn torture. Be sure to use "Gets-It." It never fails.

"Gets-It," the guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, the only sure way, costs but a trifle at any drug store. Manufactured by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Eviction of Cooties in Reichstag Is One Big Job

Berlin, June 10.—The real reason for the postponement of the session of the German National Assembly here is that the Reichstag building is infested with vermin and must be thoroughly deloused.

The magnificent structure in which the overlords of the empire used to make their bombastic speeches now is in an indescribably unsanitary condition. All around it signs of "eintritt verboten" (entrance forbidden) are posted.

Madam—Have You A Reliable Iron?

Of course you have an electric iron for you know its greater convenience. How much more rapidly the ironing can be done with it. But is your iron always reliable? Is it ready whenever you want to use it? Does it go to the repairman with its annoyances and the expense?

A million women use the American Beauty. It gives years of service without the least attention. It is fool-proof. It requires no particular care. The flexible cord is the best that can be made. You can entrust an American Beauty to the laundress without fear that she will damage it. You make her work so much easier that she would rather come back to you. She can do better work, faster work with an American Beauty.

The heat is always uniform. The mirrored surface causes the American Beauty to glide over the finest laces and the heaviest suitings.

Your neighbor knows and your dealer will tell you so. Then pay a little more and get an American Beauty.

HEALTH FILM SHOWN AT SHUBERT

By FRED J. McISAAC,
Dramatic Editor.

In company with a special audience of physicians, nurses and other professional people I witnessed a performance at the Shubert yesterday afternoon of "Open Your Eyes," a feature photoplay which is as candid and considerably more interesting than a medical journal.

The American nation got down to cases when the war burst upon us. Old scruples of delicacy were forgotten when hundreds of thousands of our best men and women went out to fight the disease which in the past had always afflicted armies and brought countless evils upon nations when the armies returned to their women.

The subject of "sex hygiene" has been taught in many woman's colleges and been placed in the high schools in some places against the protests of the old-fashioned people who cling to old-fashioned scruples. In many respects the way has been paved for such a photoplay as "Open Your Eyes."

Whether we are yet ready to look at a film which explains the causes and effects of diseases, the names of which the rules of any newspaper prohibit from being written down, and whether it is the sort of entertainment to which a young man could take a young woman with perfect tranquility, I wouldn't wish to decide.

I do know this, that if young women were taken to see this picture there might not be so much promiscuous spooning on park benches, on excursion steamers, on the beach and in dark doorways. It might even have a salutary effect upon the impetuosity of young men.

The picture is a well acted and ingeniously constructed photoplay. It cannot be accused of making vice attractive to look at, but it exhibits various forms of what the parsons call "iniquity" with much liberality. The fortunate young girl whose mother told her the mysteries of life and its pitfalls escapes. The girl with the foolish mother goes wrong and becomes the victim of an infected man.

We are introduced to half a dozen wild youths early in the picture, and all of them fall victims to disease. Whether this percentage is not much too large is something for the doctors to settle; it makes the picture impressive.

On the other hand we are not treated to the ordinary horrible progress of disease. The film plainly shows that it can be cured if taken in hand by reputable physicians, but the quack who advertises dooms all his victims.

The statement made several times, "No reputable physician advertises," is probably exaggerated, but it is likely true enough that all the sensational advertising is done by quacks.

Two very tragic moments of the film occur when the baby of one of the victims is born blind, and when a wedding is interrupted by a girl victim of the groom who warns the bride that her fiance is diseased.

The opinions of persons around me seemed to agree that "Open Your Eyes" is an effective and intensely interesting piece of health propaganda. It may outrage the sensibilities of persons from whom the sordid side of life has been carefully hidden, but I can't conceive of it sending them down the primrose path. And nothing is truer than the bromide:

"Ignorance is not innocence."

WALDORF THEATRE—An especially fine bill of vaudeville acts and photoplay subjects was presented yesterday at the Waldorf Theatre. In the vaudeville were Lane and Moran in a comedy skit with songs entitled, "Listen, Mickey"; Dae and Neville in a one-act comedy that proved an undoubted hit; the Four Solaras who gave a sensational aerial exhibition together with songs and dances, and Georgia Emmett, a dainty singing comedienne. On the screen there were shown the latest news pictures, a comedy, and Anita Stewart in "A Midnight Romance." This is a delightful story of a mysterious young woman who causes much speculative suspense among the guests of a Summer hotel the while she is the central figure of a charming love romance.

Plays That Remain

MAJESTIC THEATRE—Again the Majestic Theatre was packed to the doors last night at the opening of the second week of the screen version of Major Rupert Hughes' "The Unpardonable Sin," a story with a thrill for every moment and which is acknowledged as one of the best examples of photographic and dramatic art ever seen on the screen.

COLONIAL THEATRE—The third week of the engagement of David W. Griffith's "Broken Blossoms" began at the Colonial Theatre last evening. This production of the master is receiving like reception to his other great offerings that have made history of the cinema.

TREMONT THEATRE—"Flo-Flo" began its final week at the Tremont Theatre last evening. This merry musical comedy has had a happy stay in Boston since it was first presented seven weeks ago, and it finishes out two months of consistently good business.

NORUMBEGA PARK—"Officer 666" will succeed "What Happened to Jones" as the vehicle of the Liberty Players at Norumbega Park next Monday. These capable players have scored another big hit in "What Happened to Jones," being applauded to numerous encores at both performances yesterday. They give two performances daily in the big open-air theatre, the acoustics of which makes playgoing a Summer delight. Numerous organizations are already taking advantage of the excellent facilities for group outings offered by the park's large athletic field and picnic grounds.

BOSTON THEATRE—May Allison is the star in the feature film, "Castles in Air," at the Boston theatre this week. It is a real comedy and puts Miss Allison well in the class with the famous comedians of the movies. The vaudeville bill includes Jimmy Salvo and company and Three Weber Girls.

REVIVAL OF "OH BOY" IS ARTISTIC

By way of introducing its Summer season at the Plymouth Theatre last evening, Carl Hunt's musical comedy company took a capacity audience by storm in its presentation of that intimate, tuneful success, "Oh, Boy!"

Thanks to wartime circumstances, perhaps, Mr. Hunt has the very good fortune to give Boston in the warm months, in an atmospherically comfortable playhouse, such a formidable company as is worthy of its staunchest support.

Last evening's performance may be taken as a fair criterion, since a cast including Dorothy Maynard, Flavia Arcaro, Charles Compton, Irving Beebe, Lenora Chippendale, John Norton and several others in the most successful of big metropolitan productions.

While it might be unkind to contrast the version of "Oh Boy!" as given last evening with the performance of the original cast, the contrast can by no means be distinctive. Not only are the principal roles handled by accomplished performers, but the production is enhanced by a talented chorus. They will add greatly to forthcoming performances of the company.

There were many who went only to hear again the tuneful score of the popular success. They were amply rewarded by the merit with which it was given. The play lost none of its daintiness in the hands of the Hunt players.

Dorothy Maynard, the prima donna, gave a delightful interpretation of the role of Jackie Sampson, the winsome heiress whose tribulations in love affairs with a well-meaning, though particularly unfortunate "man about town," not only won her the favor of her audience, but its earnest sympathies as well. Miss Maynard has a charming voice, one that will win her immense popularity with Boston's Summer theatre-goers.

PEMBERTON INN—The swimming pool at Pemberton Inn, the only pool of its kind in New England, is now open, and must be added to the list of attractions which make the Inn the Summer restaurant de luxe of the South Shore.

Two seaplanes are now at t[illegible]ice of patrons of the Inn for flights over the bay. This feature, an innovation unique at the Inn, has become intensely popular. Edith and Addison Fowler, Louise Mack and the Banjo Harmony Boys, with their jazz music for dancing, continue to delight patrons.

WHY LORD RIBBLESDALE WON MRS. ASTOR

Intensely Interesting Reading
On the Subject of Anglo-American "Social" Life

MRS. ASTOR had reason to consider well, to analyze most minutely the man who became her second husband. She had married an Astor, wealthy and socially perfect. After years of uncongenial married life then came the divorce court. Since then Mrs. Astor has spent much of her time in England, courted persistently by the greatest men of Europe.

VOICE IN DARK MYSTERY PLAY WELL ACTED

By FRED J. McISAAC,
Dramatic Editor.

Miracles are everyday occurrences at the theatre these days. In "On Trial" we saw a man killed in the first act, and in the second saw him making love to a girl three years before. In "Common Clay," "Eyes of Youth" and several similar fairy tales we witnessed almost equally uncommon happenings.

Last night in "A Voice in the Dark" was the first time I ever saw a man killed twice, but that is the novelty presented by Willard Mack and Ralph E. Dyer in a curious melodrama at the Park Square.

The piece is in three acts and nine scenes, most by dark changes. When somebody invents noiseless scenery these quick shifts will be truly effective. Last night the dialogue was supposed to carry through the changes, but the rumble and clatter of the wings and drops made it unintelligible.

Nevertheless "A Voice in the Dark" is a very enthralling and exciting mystery. Like previous Willard Mack offerings it is full of ingenious stage tricks, amusing conversation and good climaxes.

A murder has been committed and the fiancee of the young lawyer, Willard Mack, is accused of the crime. A very deaf old lady saw her quarrelling with the murdered man, saw him fall dead and saw the girl with a gun in her hand.

Her evidence appears conclusive until a blind man is found who heard another woman confess the crime, and recognizes the voice as the old lady's attendant.

The novelty in the piece is this. The principals play the scene leading to the murder in pantomime because the old lady cannot hear a word they are saying. There is no sound of a shot because she cannot hear that.

Later when the accused girl is telling her story the same scene is played over again with exactly the same gestures and movements save that the missing dialogue is supplied this time. Thus it happens that the murder occurs twice.

When you come to think of it the dialogue sheds no more light on the murder than the pantomime, so that the deaf old lady might just as well have had her hearing and the scene could have been played completely the first time, but an ingenious bit of staging would have been missed. I see that the blind man originally heard the dialogue which the deaf woman missed but that the story was twisted around because it didn't work out well in action.

Now the blind man overhears a conversation elsewhere by two people who didn't figure in the murder scene at all, and his evidence convicts the guilty and releases the innocent girl.

The play is beautifully performed. Mack is a faithful and magnetic lover and a skillful cross examiner. Olive Wyndham is a striking and effective heroine. Frank Munroe is again a plain clothes man, a role in which he may be said to be a specialist. William B. Mack, last seen as the doctor in "Adam and Eve," a role in which he was horribly miscast, was himself again as a blind beggar, a fine piece of characterization.

Arleen Hackett as the real murderess did some convincing acting. Florine Arnold as the dear old woman was exceedingly amusing. John Sharkey was a likely looking Pinkerton and Doris Kelly was just right as a flip stenographer. Richard Gordon as the Lothario who was killed twice did excellent work and so did W. L. Thorne and Stewart E. Wilson.

MODERN THEATRE—In point of variety and excellence the program of first run photoplays shown yesterday at the Modern Theatre were of exceptionally pleasing quality. And in the perfect manner in which pictures are projected at this cozy little theatre they gained enchanced value in appreciation. Pauline Frederick, the beautiful emotional star, was shown pictured in "The Fear Woman." This is the story of a young society woman who fights a tremendous fear that she has inherited the love for liquor. This fear carries her to extreme lengths and the interest of this moving story is created by the methods wherewith she is cured.

PARAGON PARK, offering all the attractions of an up to date circus, with many [illegible] ideal surroundings, which no circus can boast, Paragon Park with its charming palm gardens, continues the favorite hot weather resort of Greater Boston. The centre of attraction is, of course, the palm garden, where while eating delicious food and sipping cooling drinks one may watch and listen to the finest cabaret in New England.

"The Broadway Revue of 1919" as Art Spaulding has named his brand new starting entertainment is filled with catchy music, pretty girls and pleasing dances. Edna Leader, Frances Feeley and the other favorites are all there.

'BOLSHEVISM' FILM STRONG LOVE TALE

"Bolshevism On Trial," which has been aptly described as the [illegible] of photo plays, had its premier production here at Tremont Temple. It is a filmed version of the story "Comrades," [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation." It is safe to say that if "The Birth of a Nation" started a furor, and a purpose, "Bolshevism On Trial" possesses both, and is a lesson to those who may be against Bolshevism as well as those who take only a passing interest in it.

The new play was ushered in with a brief address by Albert P. Langtry, in which the secretary of State said he did [illegible] there is no place for Bolshevism here [illegible] than a [illegible] to the top of the ladder and quoted the words of Abraham Lincoln's mother to her son, "Abe, be somebody."

But apart from the serious side of the picture there is a wholesome love story, and there are a score [illegible] series of beautiful [illegible] Worth, son of a millionaire [illegible] Worth, just returned from service in France with the Lafayette Escadrille, attends a meeting where "The [illegible] that will light the world [illegible]" was the slogan. From Socialism Norman drifts into a trial of Bolshevism.

He and several hundred "advanced Socialists" take possession of the Island of Ventura, on which stands a large hotel whose owners have become bankrupt. It is here that the colony try to put Bolshevism into practical operation, with results that must be seen to be fully understood, but the experiment proved that it is easy to overload the well known wagon hitched to the proverbial star. It is demonstrated fairly that the greatest danger to humanity today is the element that tries to enforce a panacea for the ills afflicting humanity.

"Bolshevism On Trial" presents hosts of characters types to be found in the best streets or the back streets, in the drawing room or the jail, and they are all thrown together, the gullible idealist, the self confident, dictating demagogue, and the uncertain patriot—in such a way as to interest all kinds of people.

"Bolshevism On Trial" is the first film production of the Mayflower Photo Play Company. Most of the scenes were made in Florida and there is one beach scene featuring a number of newly-converted Bolshevik girls riding the breakers in apparently old-fashioned suits that would be more interesting if the camera had caught them closer.

COPLEY THEATRE—For the second week of their Summer season the Jewett Players gave "Are You a Mason?" at the Copley Theatre. The audience was composed to some extent of seasoned theatre goers to whom the farce wears a dear and familiar aspect. Although to the youngest generation of spectators it seems old fashioned, it is always delightful, full of amusing situations, humorous dialogue and stage business.

The story, familiar to most play goers, is of an elderly "rounder" and his son-in-law, who pretend to be Masons in order that they may cover up their nocturnal absences from home.

Jessamine Newcome appeared as Eva, Viola Roach as Mrs. Amos Bloodgood, E. E. Clive as George Fisher, Nicholas Joy as Frank Perry, Leonard Craske as Travers, Cameron Matthews as John Halton, and H. Conway Wingfield as Bloodgood.

HARVARD CREW MAKES FAST TIME

Harvard Training Quarters, Red Top, [illegible] June 10.—After a long rest Sunday for the Harvard crews Coach Haines took advantage of the ideal conditions yesterday and sent his crews over the course in their respective stations.

In the morning he sent the varsity boat over the course [illegible] They were paced by the second varsity for the first two miles and by the freshmen for the rest of the distance.

The stroke averaged from 30 to 32, and never went over 34 for the entire distance. It was the varsity's first trip over the distance, but the way in which they were able to raise the stroke during the last mile greatly pleased Haines. The time as given out was 21 min. 18 sec. The varsity was leading by about a quarter of a length at the end of the four miles. The crews paddled back to the quarters in short easy stretches.

In the afternoon the freshman eight and second varsity had another row over the upper end of the course upstream. The second varsity boat won the race by nearly half a length, although Captain Batchelder was not in his seat, his place being taken by Boland, one of the subs.

Batchelder was elected captain yesterday by the second crew and left last night for Boston to obtain treatment of his injured knee. He [illegible] back in a day or so.

Dr. Denny, the crew doctor, arrived yesterday and will remain until after the races.

Get Back Your Grip On Health

Physician Gives Practical Advice on What to Do to Help Build Up Your Strength, Power and Endurance—Explains How Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron—Helps Put Renewed Vim and Energy Into the Veins of the Weak, Nervous and Run-down—

Thousands of men and women are [illegible] their constitutions, laying themselves open to illness and literally [illegible] health simply because their blood is thinning out and possibly starving through [illegible]

To possess the power, energy and endurance that win, the blood should be rich in strength-giving [illegible]

[illegible] Nuxated Iron [illegible] which by enriching the blood and creating thousands of new red blood cells often quickly transform the flabby flesh, toneless tissues and pallid cheeks of weak, anaemic men and women into a glow of health [illegible] increases the strength of delicate, nervous, rundown folks in two weeks' time in many instances.

[illegible] Hospital of New York, says:

[illegible] necessary to change [illegible] muscle and brain. Refined foods and modern methods of cooking have robbed us of much of the iron which Nature intended we should receive [illegible] I know of nothing more effective than organic iron—Nuxated Iron [illegible] Nuxated Iron [illegible] highly beneficial and satisfactory results. The fact that Nuxated Iron is today being used by over three million people annually as a tonic, strength and blood builder is in itself an evidence of tremendous [illegible] confidence and I am convinced that if others would take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak and run down it would help make a nation of stronger, healthier men and women.

Commenting on the use of Nuxated Iron as a tonic, strength and blood builder, Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, said:

Thousands are held back in life for want of sufficient iron in the blood. A weak body means a weakened will power, and like the race horse beaten by a nose, many a capable man or woman fails just short of winning because they don't back up their mentality with the physical strength and energy which [illegible] that dizzy, fearful feeling [illegible] these are the sort of signals nature gives to tired, listless folks when the blood is [illegible] nothing for strength-giving and more iron to restore the health by enriching the blood and creating thousands of new red blood cells.

In my opinion the greatest curse to the health and strength of American people of today is the alarming deficiency of iron in their blood. It is through iron in the red coloring matter of the blood that life-sustaining oxygen enters the body [illegible] strength and endurance [illegible] Lack of sufficient iron in the blood has ruined many a man's nerves and utterly robbed him of that virile force and stamina which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life.

Therefore I strongly advise those who feel the need of a strength and blood builder to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated [illegible] you don't want to go to this trouble then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit.

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated Iron, recommended [illegible] is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

These men Dempsey was beating in the four-rounders were not men of any great class, however, but the way he was beating them marked a steady improvement in Jack.

They brought Gunboat Smith out to the coast, and in the second round the old Gunner, then not as good as he used to be, but always dangerous, landed that long, looping overland right of his on Jack's chin. It was, according to Jack, the hardest smash that ever hit him.

"I was plumb out, standing up," says Dempsey. "I don't know yet how I managed to keep on going. My, what a wallop!"

"Jack didn't savvy what he was [illegible] ing until he got back to [illegible] room," put in Kearns. "I thought he was a goner, but he got the [illegible] decision. He just fought on [illegible] of instinct, I guess."

Carl Morris [illegible] was still floating around [illegible] was match[illegible] Sapulpa was a [illegible] got a very [illegible] He [illegible] [illegible] the other fellow [illegible] and then [illegible] [illegible] fight.

DEMPSEY WHIPS MORRIS.

Jack's showing in four [illegible] Morris [illegible] for he gave Morris a [illegible] ris was then considered about as good as the big fellows [illegible] W[illegible] wasn't so all-fired good, however.

"I hadn't been feeling very well for some time before that fight," says Dempsey. "I was sort of dopey and [illegible] anaemic. The night before the fight I was in a saloon with Marty Farrell, another boxer, and I [illegible] beer, thinking it would [illegible] I drunk ten dollars' worth of beer before I got [illegible] and I was [illegible] up when I went home. But it seemed to do me a lot of good. I never felt better in my life when I got into the ring with Carl."

A real sickness befel Jack right after that engagement and [illegible] a bad way that he had to go back to Salt Lake City. He was [illegible] about two [illegible] When he got out again Kearns was on hand to take him to Chicago. By this time, of course, his new fame had reached the East.

His first match was with Homer Smith at Racine, Wis. One minute and thirty seconds for Homer. Then the smacking of Jim Flynn of Fort Sheridan, narrated before.

"I [illegible] that just as quick as I could," says Jack significantly. "I had something to make up there."

GETTING TO THE TOP.

Now came the battle that was the biggest boost of his career to date, and that was the fight with Carl Morris at Buffalo, their second meeting. Morris was going good at that time and when Dempsey stopped the [illegible] it caused a mild [illegible] Morris never got a chance to [illegible] Dempsey as the [illegible] away from h[illegible]

"I [illegible] down to the second," says Dempsey. "I thought the referee gave him a long count."

He flattened [illegible] times in the second round [illegible] in the sixth. Then he [illegible] down to Memphis and knocked out somebody called Jack Smith in a minute. He returned to Chicago to find a message from Jimmy Bronson with business for him in Joplin, Mo.

Jimmy had Fred Fulton matched to meet Tom Riley at Joplin, but the [illegible] from [illegible] Minn. had [illegible] for a [illegible] with Willard, so the Riley date was [illegible]

He was booked to [illegible] Parks [illegible] Jim Wood [illegible] [illegible] been following the [illegible] boxed his first ten rounds with [illegible] Misk[illegible] It went ten rounds and Dempsey got most of the newspaper decisions.

Here is another chap, Bill Miske, who may be better than people think, and whose performances against Dempsey are evidence of [illegible] rather than [illegible] shortcomings of Jack [illegible] never [illegible] as is proposed to [illegible] real great fighter [illegible] Miske.

Dempsey met him again later on and again failed to stop him. It has been suggested that Jack "holds him up" [illegible] to knock [illegible] that [illegible] part [illegible] fighters always have [illegible]

Meehan and Miske, these two in Dempsey's [illegible] are hard to explain.

"They [illegible]," says Dempsey.

DEMPSEY IN LEGAL TANGLE.

I am not going into the various aspects of the argument, but the upshot [illegible] was the court decided in Dempsey's favor. He was "[illegible]" of "[illegible]"

Now [illegible] than any [illegible] with Willard [illegible] heavyweight champions [illegible] was the [illegible] battle with Fred Fulton [illegible] the old Federal League baseball yard at Harrison, N. J.

Like Dempsey, Fulton had been coming on. He had stopped tough old Frank Moran in three rounds. Willard hadn't been able to do that.

Probably most followers of fistic events really thought Fulton a better man than Dempsey. They couldn't see how Jack was ever to be able to get past that murderous ripping left hand of the plasterer's.

FULTON PROVES EASY.

Dempsey walked out of his corner [illegible] at Fulton's feet. Fulton made one timid dab with that [illegible] left, and Dempsey [illegible] him a [illegible] the stomach and a few on the jaw. Fulton crumpled up like a [illegible] of asparagus and was counted [illegible]

It was over before some of the [illegible] reached the park.

Afterward Fulton said it was a fake, but nobody who saw Jack clip the [illegible] plasterer that day takes much stock in the "confession."

"If it was a fake I certainly didn't know it," says Jack.

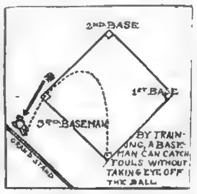
How to Play Baseball

THIS is the fifteenth of a series of 100 articles by Hugh S. Fullerton, celebrated baseball expert, on "How to Play Baseball." In this lesson Mr. Fullerton continues to tell how to play third base. These articles will be a feature of the American's sport pages each day. Don't miss them.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

One essential to successful playing at third base [illegible] catch foul flies. [illegible] third baseman ought to [illegible] almost as many foul flies as the catcher and many more than the first baseman.

First study the geography of the field and the position of the sun. In some fields the stands are a heavy handicap to third basemen, especially those who are timid about approaching a wall. By training, a baseman can locate the stands so that he can catch fouls falling almost against the concrete without taking his eyes off the ball.



BY TRAINING, A BASEMAN CAN CATCH FOULS WITHOUT TAKING EYE OFF THE BALL.

In one season on the Polo Grounds I kept track for two months of foul flies which would have been caught but for the closeness of the stands and discovered that they average more than two a game.

The great number of fouls caught on the Pittsburgh grounds, for instance, is due to the fact that the fielders can run long distances without fear of bumping against the stands. The light hitting on the Pittsburgh field is partially accounted for in this manner.

After practicing catching fouls until you have located the stands, the next important step is to have a thorough [illegible] standing with the catcher [illegible] It is well to study the condition of the sun before each game and decide with the catcher before the game starts.

If the sun is high it is best to allow the catcher, whose back will be to the sun, to [illegible] almost [illegible] third base for which he [illegible] the third baseman will [illegible] toward the stand. In any event it is important that [illegible] one man on each [illegible] to direct and coach fielders when they are catching fly balls in neutral territory.

[illegible] is the best judge of the position of the ball and [illegible] carry the name of the [illegible] The worst possible thing is to have two or more players calling directions. This [illegible] the players sometimes [illegible] in [illegible] more frequently [illegible] permitting [illegible] easy fly to fall safe and giving the batter an[illegible] [illegible] better after [illegible] been saved by a [illegible] an [illegible] before.

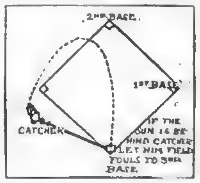
The shortstop, of course, is in best position to catch such balls, but the third baseman who can make such catches [illegible] the shortstop [illegible] covers more [illegible]



IF THE SUN IS BEHIND CATCHER LET HIM FIELD FOULS TO 3RD BASE.

What Is the Ideal Modern Wife?

MANY an American warrior, who never dreamed, prior to the war, of marrying outside of his native land, has found his ideal of womanhood overseas. Witness the number of brides taken by our service men.

This romance phase of the war has brought to the fore the absorbing question of what is the best kind of a mate for a man.

Has war broadened or in any other way changed the general masculine view toward womanhood. Our young men have acquired a stern realization of life. Will they be more critical in their search for a wife?

Exactly what is the ideal modern wife?

A prize of $25 will be awarded for the letter which, in the opinion of the judges, embodies the clearest and most unbiased answer. For the letter adjudged second best $10 will be awarded, and for the letter adjudged third best $5.

The decisions will be made by Beatrice Fairfax.

Confine your letter to 200 words, write on one side of the paper only and give your name and address. Only initials will be used if you so prefer.

The contest closes Saturday noon, June 14. No letters received after that date will be considered. The announcement of the winners will be made during the week of June 23.

Address letters to Boston American Magazine Page, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

A Slow Wooing

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

[illegible] I always dearly loved her, but never told her. About a year ago I joined the army. In a short time I wrote her a card, then it got to be very friendly letters, and when I came home about two months ago I called on her, and she seemed greatly pleased to see me. I told her of my love for her, and she readily told me the [illegible] and kissing party for a half hour or so.

Now the question I would like to have answered is this: Is [illegible] She is as good a girl as can be found.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We were to be married as soon as I was discharged from the navy but on my return from Siberia I called upon my sweetheart and she told me she no longer loved me.

I have called repeatedly, but each time I was informed that she was not at home. Last week I met her and asked her to explain the sudden coldness, to which she replied that she was tired of me.

Now, Miss Fairfax, when I am earning $ [illegible] a position to marry. Do you think it advisable for me to try to win her back, as I dearly love her and there never can be any other?

Stocks Weaken in New York During the Morning

MOTOR ISSUES RECEDE THE MOST

General Motors Off More Than 18 Points at Its Lowest

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were weak in New York at noon, but the market had improved during the second hour and at the end of the morning prices were above their lowest level. After an irregular start a recessional movement lasted during the first hour and affected almost all issues. Tobaccos showed strength as a group, however. Among stocks to decline the most during the forenoon were Studebaker, General Motors, Mexican Petroleum, Texas Co., Advance Rumely, American International, Atlantic Gulf, Central Leather, Continental Can, Maxwell, National Enameling and U. S. Rubber. They showed at their lowest declines of from two to more than eighteen points. General Motors sustained the largest loss.

U. S. Steel was off half a point at noon after ranging from 109⅜ to 110⅞. Coppers started strong and during the morning Anaconda, American Smelting, Kennecott, Chile, Chino and Cerro de Pasco sold at their year's highest. They weakened later and by noon were from half a point to a little more than a point lower. Rails declined, Southern Pacific showing the largest loss.

Tobacco Products and United Cigar Stores sold at their record highest prices.

Motors were the weakest group and during the morning General Motors sold as low as 220, off 18¼ from Monday's closing figure. Studebaker touched 108⅛ at its lowest. By noon General Motors had rallied to 228 and Studebaker 109½.

The market was active.

IRREGULAR AT THE OPENING.

The price trend was indefinite at the opening and the list was irregular as to price changes. There was less demand for most stocks, although a few were in more request than usual. Some traders think the bull movement had culminated, but this belief is disputed by many others. The increase of more than $200,000,000 in loans last week, as revealed by the Saturday bank statement, caused a good deal of comment. Loans have attained a highest record figure. In some quarters there is belief that before long there will be less money available for stock market operations. There is more conservatism in financial districts in regard to speculation and perhaps a little less eagerness to engage in it on the part of the public.

CROP REPORT SATISFACTORY.

The latest crop report was very satisfactory, and one of the strongest props to the stock market is the harvest outlook. In the West and South there is confidence of a most prosperous Autumn, and this has provided stock brokers with an army of new clients. The copper metal situation is much better and steel mills are becoming more active. Business in general is feeling the effects of a revival of industrial activity and the promise of abundant agricultural yields. The situation in other countries which have been at war is not so favorable, and it is becoming more apparent that this the United States will be called upon to furnish as much financial aid to foreign patrons as it did to allies in war.

INVESTORS ARE BUYING MORE INDUSTRIAL STOCKS

There appears to be more favor shown the stocks of leading American industrial corporations by investors than at any time in years. It is demonstrated by the increase in the number of holders of the shares of such companies as the U. S. Steel Corporation, United Fruit, American Sugar, American Telephone, United Shoe and many others.

An instance of the increase is afforded by the American Agricultural Chemical Company. On March 20, 1917, the company had 1,747 common stockholders, a year later 1,973, and on March 24, 1919, 4,442.

COPPER SHARES THE BOSTON FEATURE

Advanced From One to Two Points on the Local Exchange

At the opening the Boston market was firm, but became irregular within a few minutes. It remained stronger during the morning than New York, however. Coppers were the feature here and a number, including St. Mary's Mineral Land, Osceola, Ahmeek, Allouez, Isle Royale and Old Dominion, were strong. They advanced from one to two points. Among low priced coppers, Utah Consolidated was active and sold higher.

There were good gains for Warren Brothers and United Fruit during the morning. Ventura Oil, which opened at its highest record price, United Shoe and Waldorf, which sold at its highest since being listed on the Boston Stock Exchange, were among the most active issues. Isle Royale and Old Dominion sold at their highest for 1919 to date.

Boston Elevated was weak and packing issues had a receding tendency. Coal mining shares were quiet. Most declines were fractional. Trading was in good volume.

Pig iron production is increasing.

New York, June 10.—The cotton market was active and higher at the opening, first prices being up 40 to 83 points. Strong cables and rain in the belt contributed to the advance. THRILLS AND JOY RUN RIOT AT BIG CIRCUS

One Thousand Animals Entertain Children, Not to Mention the Clowns.

The Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined shows, constituting the circus colossal, drew thousands of people to the "big tent" at the old Huntington avenue grounds last night and received a thrill for every tick of the watch.

Men, women and children of all ages surged in the midway and in the big menagerie tent where are housed more than 1,000 animals; lions, tigers, giraffes, elephants, and the most interesting of all, a giant hippo. The side show drew well. It is about the size of the average small town circus, with a score of freaks and features new to Bostonians.

A chorus of "Oh's" from the lips of the younger generation rent the air as the blare of trumpets announced the opening of the big show and the start of the pageant before the regular performances.

A long line of knights, bold and chivalrous, clad in shining steel armor, escorted oriental princesses dressed in the most alluring of fantastic costumes. And needless to say the elephants were in line, conveying royalty.

The clowns, too, were there—more than fifty of them. They spread joy through the tent all evening with their caprices.

There were thrills enough for all on the four stages and rings. Among the features were the "Jazz Elephant Troupe," playing and dancing to the tune of jazz music.

Miss Tiny Kline, a mere slip of a girl reaching to the shoulder of the average man, gave her death-defying stunts on a revolving trapeze at the top of the big tent.

Miss Bird Millman, the queen of the tight-wire walkers, did a dainty dance of the wire and had the whole tent to herself in order that all may concentrate attention upon that one feature—and it was a marvelous act.

Miss May Wirth, who has won laurels as the world's greatest bare-back rider, did many startling stunts. Most prominent was the feat of leaping from the ground to the back of a running horse while her feet were encased in eighteen-inch baskets.

The Butterfly Girl act was perhaps the most beautiful of all. And there were about one hundred other acts, all good, the best of the circus world. Two performances a day will be given each day the rest of the week.

ARLINGTON THEATRE—The everlasting popularity of that master melodrama, "The Colleen Bawn," was again demonstrated last night at the Arlington Theatre, where Dion Boucicault's famous play began a week's run. Few performances of the season by the Arlington Stock Company have exceeded in merit its presentation of the Irish play.

The most difficult part in the play, that of the gentleman, Hardress Cregan, was played with strength and subtlety by Aubrey Bosworth. Mark Elliston made the most of the harsh personality of Danny Mann. Bella Cairns played Eily O'Connor, the ill-starred heroine, with understanding, and the women's parts were in general well taken.

Mark Kent as Myles-na-Coppaleen was the ingratiating and somewhat unscrupulous horse dealer to the life, while Dudley Ayres gave a finished performance as Kyrie Daly, the magnanimous friend of Cregan, and the nearest thing to a hero that the piece possesses.

AMERICANS CAN UNDERSELL FRENCH SILK PRODUCERS

According to a statement made in New York by a returned silk buyer who has recently been in Lyons, France, where the largest silk mills in the world were located before the war, wages have increased more than 100 per cent. in that city since the armistice and are now so high that American mills can undersell the French manufacturers, except in finer grades of face veilings.

Georgette crepes and chiffon which could be imported at prices considerably less than cost price of American manufactured goods before the war are now qouted above our prices. Only fancy handwork silks, which cannot be duplicated in this country, are being imported.

CHICAGO CLAIMS LEAD IN BUILDING CONSTRUCTION

According to an authority in Chicago that city is now leading the whole country in building construction, the valuation of building projects officially listed in May being double that of a year ago. The number of permits issued last month more than doubled those for the corresponding 1918 period.

But New York is more than five years and $250,000,000 behind in construction buildings, according to the estimate of President McGuire of the United States Realty and Improvement Company. Building construction expenditures dropped from $162,519,262 in 1912 to $21,620,000 in 1918.

Walsh's Plea for Ireland Service for Liberty

All liberty-loving Americans ought to appreciate the service which Senator Walsh of Massachusetts and Senator Borah of Idaho (but especially that of Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, whose resolution was the stronger) have rendered to the cause of liberty and the much debated right of self-determination by offering and promoting the passage in the Senate of a resolution in favor of Ireland's ambition to be free.

Not in the history of the world has there been such a persistent, relentless, fervid struggle for the freedom of a race as that which the Irish people have made in Ireland and all over the world wherever their sons and daughters have gone. The thoughtful observer is now beginning to see signs and portents of the approaching success of this historical and gallant struggle. No man who is consistent in his love of liberty and in his belief in the right of self-determination by every people, and in the sincerity with which he said "Amen" to the purpose of the nation in the war we waged against Germany, can accept a League of Nations in which the oppressor of Ireland is given a voice while she continues to be an oppressor.

If we believed in the principles which we profess, if we did not wage a hypocritical war, if we were not trying to make Germany adopt principles which we would not adopt ourselves, if we would refuse to accept a wicked partner, if we would not endanger the cause of liberty everywhere by adding our power to the power of oppressing nations, we shall insist that no nation shall join us in undertaking to police the world until that nation can come into the world's court of public opinion with clean hands. While England is oppressing Ireland and Japan is oppressing Korea and dismembering China, and Poland is massacring Jews, we cannot join with them in any alliance which will add our power to the power of oppression in the world.

What Are Ten Million Boys Worth?

It Depends Partly on What You Do With Them While They ARE BOYS

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

Every well-informed American knows the meaning of the Boy Scout movement.

That movement develops ambition, the spirit of working together, kindness, readiness with hand and mind in the boys of today that are to build the nation of the next generation.

This well-chosen picture and this editorial are printed to remind every reader of this newspaper that Boy Scout Week is here for the enrollment of a million new adult members that will pay each the very small sum of one dollar a year—more of course if they choose to, but only one dollar is asked—and what is far more important, the idea is to secure the earnest interest of a million American men and women in the welfare of the boys of the country.

In this Boy Scout movement you will find all kinds of GOOD citizens interested. You will see old ladies, bed-ridden, unable to move, reading with interest pamphlets concerning the Boy Scouts, their camps, their walks and their training.

Equally, but not more interested, is "Big Bill" Edwards, the giant that used to carry two or three men on his back in the football games. He knows what training and outdoor life do to change weak little boys into powerful men.

Working with an organization of Boy Scouts, wisely and conservatively managed, builds up the bodies of the boys. It does work that is a great deal more important than building the body. The spirit can do its best work only IN A HEALTHY BODY. But the building of the spirit is far more important than the building of the body.

And the Boy Scout movement, intended to make boys independent, able to care for themselves, think quickly and act kindly, is above all a plan to build the spirit, brain and good instincts in the young mind.

It must be remembered, and fathers and mothers should realize, that boys cannot properly be trained in ISOLATION. Man is before everything else a GREGARIOUS creature. All his good work has been accomplished working with others. His THINKING, it is true, is done in solitude, but it is association with the crowd that suggests, stimulates and feeds solitary thought.

The results obtained by the Boy Scouts prove the wisdom of Goethe's words:

The Boy Scouts work with other boys, taking their walks, vaulting fences, studying trees, animals, stones and the weather, dressing alike to develop the spirit of comradeship, putting up their tents, cutting wood for their camps—all this develops in the boys THE CHARACTER, the desire to help others, and ability to do it.

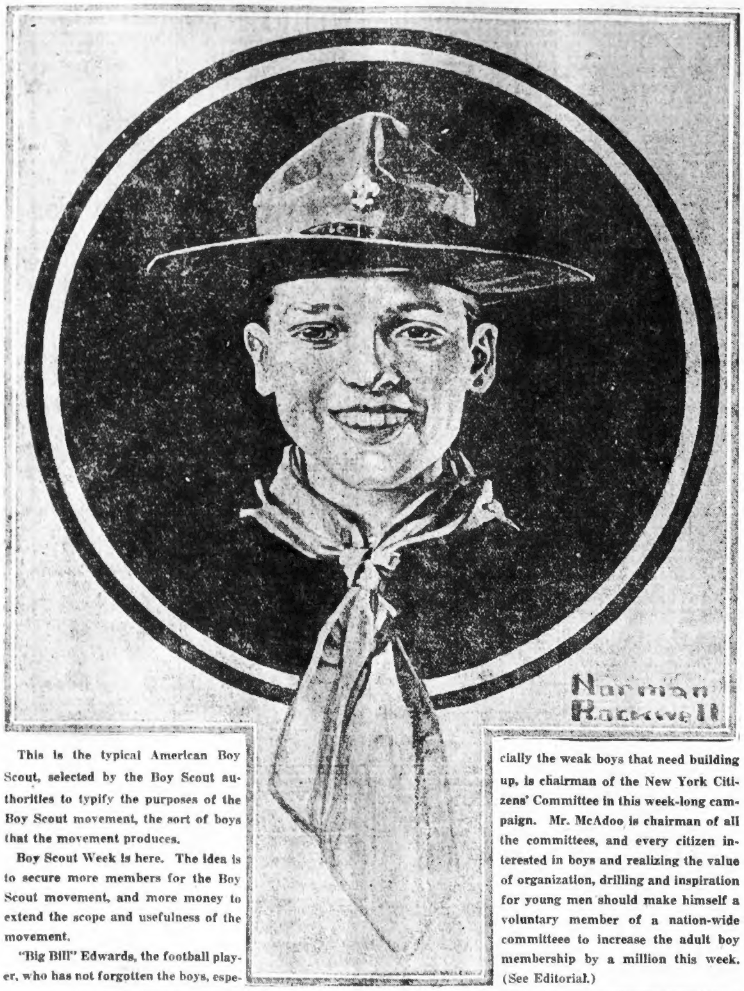
And that CHARACTER, built up in the young BOY, makes the MAN do his good work in the years afterward.

Interest yourself in the Boy Scout movement. Interest your boy in that movement, not forgetting that the duty of supervision is never taken from the parents, but remembering also that the boy lacking opportunity to deal and mingle with others as a child will find it difficult to deal successfully with others as a man.

Become THIS WEEK a member of the Boy Scout movement. The payment of a dollar is a small thing. But do not consider that you have done your share after paying a dollar or more for your membership. Interest yourself in the boys that wear the Scout uniform, and in the boys in your neighborhood that would be better for the wearing of the uniform. Get in touch with the organization and help to build up efficient citizenship by developing efficient boys in the present.

All the information you want can be secured by addressing a letter: "Local Manager of the Boy Scout Movement" in your city.

One of Ten Million Boys



This is the typical American Boy Scout, selected by the Boy Scout authorities to typify the purposes of the Boy Scout movement, the sort of boys that the movement produces.

Boy Scout Week is here. The idea is to secure more members for the Boy Scout movement, and more money to extend the scope and usefulness of the movement.

"Big Bill" Edwards, the football player, who has not forgotten the boys, especially the weak boys that need building up, is chairman of the New York Citizens' Committee in this week-long campaign. Mr. McAdoo is chairman of all the committees, and every citizen interested in boys and realizing the value of organization, drilling and inspiration for young men should make himself a voluntary member of a nation-wide committeee to increase the adult boy membership by a million this week. The Frog Pond

By Morton Birge

The former Kaiser, cables say,
Says nothing, but saws wood.
He's sawed three thousand trees or more,
He's on his way to make it four.
He's found the only job at last,

At which he's any good.

OPEN YOUR MOUTH AND SHUT YOUR EYES

Boston housewives are having one thrill of joy after another at a seeming solution of the high cost of living. Dr. Ethan Allen Andrews, professor of zoology at Johns Hopkins University, says: "Eat locusts. They are just like shrimps."

Most of us up this way had never thought of that. But why not? Professor Andrews declares the flavor pleasant.

The locust idea raised the question whether other means of sustenance might be developed which have so far been unsuspected.

Following up this thought several authorities on food and economics were queried for additional suggestions as to possibilities in food. Among the replies received so far are the following:

SILAS SILO, Indiana farm expert—"Corncobs will do it. A man who eats a meal of corncobs will wish nothing more. A cob a day keeps company away."

WILLIAM WHIRLTOP, professor of nutology, Cocaine College—"Locusts may be good, but sawdust is better and cheaper. American sawmills waste enough sawdust yearly to support Europe. Sawdust made me what I am today and I am satisfied."

IVA BUGG, president Reformed Housekeepers—"Old newspapers keep me up. I serve them chopped fine. My store bills are very small, as the children left home early and my husband eats out."

DON'T YOU LOVE THAT DEAR OLD MANIAC?

I love the nice weather man,
Who keeps me so warm,
Then freezes me solid.
I wish him no harm.
I would pay him a call
As I restlessly roam,
But why make a call
Where there's nobody home?

Ye TOWN GOSSIP

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By K. C. B.

WHERE I lived for a time.
NOT A block away.
IN A basement place.
LIVED AN old blind man.
AND EVERY day.
THERE CAME to him.
A WELL-DRESSED boy.
WHO LED him away.
TO WHEREVER he went.
AND I presumed.
THAT HE hired the boy.
UNTIL ONE day.
I TALKED with him.
AND THE old man said.
THAT THE boy had come.
OF HIS own accord.
AND HAD offered his time.
AND HAD offered his hand.
AS A guiding mark.
AND I met the boy.
AND TALKED with him.
AND HE said to me.
THAT HIS Boy Scout pledge.
HAD REQUIRED of him.
A KINDLY act.
ON EVERY day.
AND THIS all happened.
SOME YEARS ago.
AND THE boy grew up.
AND I knew him well.
AND I know him now.
AS A fine young man.
WHO NEVER fails.
IF THERE be some act.
THAT HE may do.
TO HELP some one.
AND TODAY in my mail.
HERE COMES a request.
THAT I write some lines.
FOR BOY Scout Week.
TO HELP them along.
IN THE task they've set.
TO ADD to their lists.
A MILLION names.
OF GROWN-UP folk.
AND SO I've written.
AND I'LL send my name.
AND THE name of my wife.
AND A two-dollar bill.
FOR OUR memberships.
AND AFTER that.
NO MATTER what happens.
WE'LL HAVE to remember.
ON EVERY day.
THAT THE Boy Scout pledge.
REQUIRES OF us.
THAT WE do what we may.
TO HELP other folk.
PASS THE rougher spots.
ON THE self-same road.
THAT WE all must go.
TILL WE get to the gate.
WHERE THEY'LL sort us out.
AND THERE'LL be no fear.
THAT ST. Peter will fail.
TO PICK out the Scouts.
AND LET them through.
FOR AFTER their names.
THERE'LL BE clear white marks.
FOR THE good they've done.
I THANK you.

PERSONS WHOSE LIVES ARE TRAGEDIES

By Winifred Black

SHE killed herself, the poor little bride. And all the neighbors are whispering about the husband.

"What had he done?" they ask one another.

Was there some terrible secret in his life and did she just find out about it, and was it too much for her to bear?

Or had he suddenly turned unkind and broken her heart with his cruelty?

Did he drink? Was he a drug fiend? These quiet men sometimes—you never can tell.

Were his people unkind to her? Did they show her that they didn't think she was good enough for the young husband she adored?

What Really Happened

Whisper, whisper, surmise, suspect, wonder, gossip—and all the time the little bride killed herself because the linoleum on the kitchen floor wasn't the pattern she thought it was going to be, and that's all there was to it.

Oh, of course, she thought there was something else the matter. She complained about the linoleum when her husband came home tired. He told her to stop talking about it, and she said he didn't love her any more, and he said, well, maybe he didn't, and, poof!—she was gone into the other room, and in another minute she was dead by her own hand.

Perhaps the husband ought not to have said that maybe he didn't love her any more, and, of course, what he ought to have done was to have taken her in his arms and comforted her, and told her who cared about the old linoleum, or anything else on earth, so long as they were together, just they two alone in the world.

And she would have cried and he would have kissed her, and then she would have dried her eyes and they would have laughed together—and the whole world have laughed with them.

But husband was a human being—not an angel.

His nerves were ragged—and the little bride talked about the linoleum, and he had all he could do to keep from running out to the kitchen and tearing the linoleum up off the floor and burning it into shreds, just to get rid of it once and for all. So he said what he did say and the little bride did what she did and there is an end to the whole, silly, tragic, miserable, unhappy, useless story.

Now if the little bride had only realized what a nuisance she was making of herself with her repetition of her woes about the linoleum—if she had only understood that her husband had something to think of besides her and the little household affairs—if she had only been taught common sense and self control at home before she married at all, she and the poor, dazed, young husband would be taking a walk together in the moonlight this very minute and thinking how sweet it was to live and to love, and to be practical and sane, and sensible and generous to each other's little faults and charitable to each other's little failings.

Love and Love

I wonder if it means that we're losing sight of the plain, every-day, common-sense balance of things.

I'm getting tired of plays where no one can live a minute unless they have everything exactly the way they want it.

I'm getting sick of books that try to make us believe that unless you can run away with some particular man on some particular monlight night you might as well go and jump in a bay and be done with it.

Man's Bird Brother
A Million Dollar Farm
A World for Workers
Monopoly Just Beginning

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright, 1919.)

Soon United States fliers will patrol the great forests. Each will carry with him carrier pigeons held in little strait-jackets, something like a woman's corset, holding down the pigeons' wings. When a fire is seen a pigeon is released with the news, location of fire, etc.

The pigeon flies to warn the fire department. The human flier goes on watching the forest.

There is a picture of man's progress in his machine of steel, he flies faster, higher, farther than any bird. And takes his little flying brother along as a messenger. What other wonders are locked up in that ivory temple of miracles, the human skull, to be released in time?

Nicaragua asks United States troops to protect her from invasion by Costa Rica. That is reasonable, for this continent is "our business," from Patagonia to Portland, and farther north.

But Mesopotamia, Armenia, Kurdestan and Turkey are NOT OUR business, and should not be made our business.

In Morris, Illinois, five clergymen united to denounce and boycott a young soldier, Sergeant Frank Flood. Flood had written from France to the local paper that U. S. soldiers in Europe were sober and well-behaved, in spite of beer and wine. And although a teetotaler, he denounced prohibition. The five clergymen decided to boycott a War Stamp meeting where Sergeant Flood spoke. Soldiers and their relations at once boycotted the five clergymen and their churches. Four of the clergymen have expressed their regret at having attempted to boycott Flood. Sergeant Flood, a volunteer, had this objectional paragraph in one of his letters:

"I enlisted without the aid of reformers. I fought without their aid. I can die without their aid. And, if I am lucky enough to get through, I can live without their aid."

The clergymen thought he should be suppressed; the soldiers thought not. They won.

Some gentlemen combined, in a very rough way, to steal thirty millions from the government. A government official wonders at their foolishness, saying, "they never had a chance to get away with it."

In the first place they were mere retailers in profiteering. What are thirty millions in war? They should have studied the methods of experts at Hog Island or in the flying machine line.

Mr. Erwin, Socialist editor, says:

Certainly, but individually, not collectively, and when it comes the worker's turn to take possession the worker forgets his fellows and joins the other side. For instance, Schwab, once a laborer; Carnegie, a messenger boy and later employer of Pinkertons in the Homestead strike.

Now, before too many digestions are ruined, government should decide what ingredients may be put in non-alcoholic drinks to produce an imitation of the old effects.

Young Mr. Moquin, who formerly dealt in French wines, will rely on ginger "to supply the kick." A safe reliance. But the stomach after a course of such kicks will need a new lining, just as though whiskey had done the kicking.

The telephone company, going back to private hands, asks permission to maintain a twenty per cent. rate increase because of hard times. One single branch of that company in New York made fourteen millions excess profits in three years, and in 1917, after paying all dividends, etc., had reserve funds of forty-five millions.

However, public extortion through private ownership of public necessities, is only just beginning in this country. It has politics, "patriotism" and public indifference or lack of information back of it, and it is in for a good run. When the end comes, with a bump, it will be worth watching. But, barring accidents, it is a long way off.

Constantly farmers and farms are coming up in the world after being submerged for hundreds of centuries. In Mr. Bryan's State (Nebraska), for the first time, a farm has just been sold for more than a million dollars. The farmer is getting a little cross of gold of his own.

Organized labor, it is announced, will not order a general strike because Tom Mooney is in jail for murder. Mooney may be innocent. Many, including the President and the presiding judge at his trial, think he should have another trial. However, stopping work throughout the nation would be a stupid way to protest in an individual case of injustice.
